OLD GUARD FIGHTING HARD

Willing Roosevelt Should Pick Candidate Among "Regulars" If He Will Pledge His Support

By International News Service.

Chicago, June 5.—The direct claim that Justice Hughes will have more votes on the first ballot than the combined strength of the "Favorite Son" candidates and that his nomination on an early ballot is inevitable was made by Frank H. Hitchcock, original Hughes man, here today. Hitchcock declared that the favorite sons combined hold no more than 345 votes, while it will need 493 to nominate.

The Hitchcock statement said:

"The maximum strength of the favorite son States is as follows:

"Delaware, 6 for du Pont.
"Illinois, 58 for sherman.
"Indiana, 30 for Fairbanks.
"Idaho, 8 for Borah.
"Iowa, 26 for Cummins.
"Massachusetts, 36 for Weeks.
"Ohio, 48 for Burton.
"Wisconsin, 15 for LaFollette.

"In the remaining States delegates have been instructed for candidates other than Hughes as follows:

"Kentucky, 8 for Fairbanks.
"Michigan, 30 for Ford.
"Minnesota, 24 for Cummins.
"Montana, 8 for Cummins.
"Nebraska, 16 for Cummins.
"North Dakota, 10 for LaFollette.
"South Dakota, 10 for Cummins.

Hughes Refuses to Be Smoked Out by Roosevelt Men

By International News Service.

Washington, June 5.—Roosevelt followers in the Progressive camp have failed in their efforts to force Justice Charles E. Hughes to declare himself on the "Roosevelt policies."

Justice Hughes will make no comment concerning the Republican National Convention or the boom for his nomination for the presidency.

His final word was said when he authorized a statement last week that no man was representing him at Chicago in connection with the nomination. This was stated today by Lawrence H. Green, Justice Hughes' private secretary.

"There will be no further comment of any kind authorized by Justice Hughes," said Mr. Green.

Even in the event that Justice Hughes is nominated by the Republicans, it is considered certain here that he will make no announcement of whether he will accept or reject the honor until the Bull Moose take some definite stand as to the nomination.

"Jingo," Armored Dinosaur, on Way to the Convention

By International News Service.

Washington, June 5.—"Jingo," the armored dinosaur that the pacifists have been parading in big Eastern cities as a symbol of "military preparedness," which they detest, is today on his way to Chicago with instructions to nose his way in between the G. O. P. elephant and the bull moose.

"Jingo" is being guided by a guardian angel, a real angel.—Miss Pauline Angell of New York city, a Vassar graduate.

By International News Service.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 5.—George B. Cortelyou, former secretary of the treasury and former postmaster general, was the only prominent political visitor to call on Colonel Roosevelt today. TELLS HOW WARSHIPS SANK

British Officers Say Germans Lost Battleship Hindenburg and Battle Cruiser Lutzow

London, June 5.—British officers of the fleet which participated in the Jutland battle and have returned here identify two German capital ships sunk as the Hindenburg, battleship, and the Lutzow, battle cruiser. Sailors say that the Hindenburg was struck successively by four torpedoes while the destroyers dashed in along side of her hull, tearing her to pieces until the mighty ship reeled and sank.

London, June 5.—Wounded sailors and unwounded survivors who have reached England give thrilling accounts of the action. When the engagement opened on Wednesday afternoon the ships were fifteen miles apart, the gunners on both sides firing at invisible targets.

An interview printed in the Times with a sailor on one of the British ships says in part:

"It was just after 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon that the order sounded through the ship that sent every man to his post. The decks were already cleared for action, as we were near German waters and were prepared for any emergency.

There was a trying wait when we did not know what was going to happen.

"At last word went around that Admiral Beatty's flagship, the battle cruiser Lion, which was leading our line, had signalled that the enemy was in sight. It was not many minutes afterward that the Lion fired the first shot. It was at very long range, but we were going at full speed and rapidly drawing in upon the Germans.

"One by one the other ships began firing and then for five hours we were at it, every gun raining shells at top

SALONICA SEIZED BY FRENCH

General Serrail Annexes City Despite Greek Protest; Act Arouses Small Nation's Anger

Salonica, Greece, June 5.—While all the Greek troops in the Salonica district were attending a celebration of the King's saint day, French troops under General Serrail, assisted by French gendarmes, seized the city.

General Serrail immediately declared Salonica in a state of siege and under French rule.

The French position at Lake Ardjan is being violently shelled by the Bulgarians. Lake Ardjan is five miles inside the Greek border and lies southwest of Kilindir.

Since the declaration of martial law by the allies the railroads are being operated by Greeks, but under the control of the French army officials. The Greek police are helping preserve order.

Tremendous excitement has been aroused among the population and the troops as well since the seizure of the city by the French. Urgent messages have been sent to the King at Athens begging protest and action.

The local authorities are furious. They declare their intention of endeavoring to retake the city, come what may.

The French coup was sprung while practically every Greek was at a great field mass and the city was at the mercy of the allied troops.

The French seized the postoffice, occupied the port and took command of the prefecture.

They also occupied the offices of the chief of police, ordering that official to leave the city.

Edward Wilcox, who lives on High street, Hingham, heard a crash and notified the police. They found Hersey seated at the wheel of a stalled automobile, and on trying to arouse him found he was dead. Healey was later found in a shed near Mr. Wilcox's house.

The dead man was twenty-five years old and was employed by Curtis & Waugh, automobile agents, to whom the machine belonged. He was the son of Charles Hersey of Fort Hill street.

Reserves Called Out as Clash on Labor Threatens

Police reserves were called out in South Boston today to quell a disturbance started by about 100 Italians at Drydock avenue, near the L street bridge.

The men, who had threatened Patrolman William Kinsman were driven from the district.

According to the police, the Italians arrived at Drydock avenue and attempted to force some of their countrymen to quit the work of laying conduits for the F. A. Snow Contracting Company. EVIDENCE AGAINST SHAW

Melrose Police Hunt for Boston Facts Bearing on the Murder of the Little Wakelin Girl

Evidence which the police believe will shatter the alibi of Harold Shaw, who, with Harold Mead, is held in connection with the murder of little Loretta Winifred Wakelin of Melrose, was secured today.

Following a conference in the Hanover street police station between Chief George E. Kerr of Melrose and Captain Matthew J. Dailey, a squad of police officers combed the waterfront, interviewing everyone believed to have talked with the two boys on their visit to Boston.

Captain Dailey later declared he believed Shaw was lying when he attempted to establish the alibi, and that Mead was telling the truth when he confessed to the murder of the little girl, which he said was witnessed by the other boy.

As further evidence of guilt, the police point to the flight of the two boys when they saw Patrolman Brennan in the Atlantic avenue shipping office on Saturday, and Shaw's attitude when he learned that Mead had confessed.

PHOTOGRAPH FINGER PRINTS.

"What did you say all that for?" he demanded angrily, when told of what Mead had said.

The police today photographed finger prints on the suitcase which the boys were carrying at the time of their arrest, and will compare these with the prints found on Loretta Wakelin's school book. They also announced their intention of having analyzed the brown spots on a pair of trousers which were in the suit case, and which Mead is said to have admitted were his property.

Strengthened in their belief that Harold Mead told the truth when he speed upon the enemy. We were slapping a zigzag course all the time in order to prevent the enemy from keeping the ranges. Most of the fighting was done at 9,000 yards and it was deadedly deadly for the Germans. The German ships outnumbered us, but this would not have mattered if they had not had the advantage in position for the good part of the fight.

NEW GERMAN STORY OF BIG NAVAL BATTLE

"The sea was of very difficult for our gunners. The Germans could see up all right, but it was very hard for us to see them. The shells were dropping around us like hail, hitting and others falling into the water and sending up high columns of spray.

GAS SHELLS USED.

"Our armor plate was dented with holes six inches deep in some places, but none of the German shells hit us in a vital spot or even put one of our guns out of commission. The worst part of the bombardment was the use of gas shells, which exploded on board sitting the vessel with sickening fumes.

"There were only a few men killed and wounded on our ship, but I saw two or three others burning and, I believe, the other was the Invincible. I saw the Queen Mary blow up.

"If the Germans were using Zeppelins I did not see any of them. I am doubtful is the Germans did, for they had no warning of the approach of our big ships.

"The Queen Mary was the first of the English ships to go down. A gigantic shell pushed through her thinner plating, exploding the magazine. The ship sank like a stone. The next victim of German shells was the indefatigable. German shells with poison gas filled the vessel with fumes and worked great havoc among the gun crews. Soon the Lion had to fall out of line, one of her turrets having jammed and several of her guns having been put out of commission.

REPORT EXPERTS DOWNED.

"About this time the Invincible Indomitable and Inflexible arrived from another station and with them came armored cruisers of the second cruiser squadron, including the Warrior, Defence and Black Prince.

"The Invincible was riddled with shells and was struck by a torpedo in a vital spot.

According to late British claims, the German battle cruiser Seydlitz has been reduced to three or four units, if not less, as a result of the naval engagement in the North Sea on Wednesday. As late official reports are received, it becomes more and more evident that the British fleet won a decisive victory over the German high seas fleet, say observers here. At least eighteen German men of war are now believed to have been destroyed, aggregating 114,123 tons.

The German Admiralty on the contrary declares that all the German losses have been announced in official Berlin statements. It denies that any Zeppelin was lost.

SEYDLITZ MAY HAVE SUNK.

A Rotterdam dispatch today says that the powerful German battle cruiser Seydlitz must have been sunk by the British warships. It is reported from Hook of Holland that the Seydlitz was sighted Thursday morning, thirty-eight miles west of Farne Island, going south, pursued by British warships. She was badly damaged. The Seydlitz, a sister ship of the Derfflinger, displaced 25,000 tons.

A Copenhagen dispatch states that German marines received their losses in the battle off Jutland on Wednesday were colossal. Only a few men were saved from each of the lost ships. Survivors from the cruisers stayed on rafts for thirty-six hours without food, says the dispatch, and became demented and jumped into the sea. Several German torpedo boats and submarines were capsized by British shells and sunk at once.

The following semi-official account of the naval battle off Jutland has been received here from Berlin:

"The German high seas fleet had pushed into the North Sea in the hope of encountering and destroying that fleet which had recently been repeatedly reported off the Norwegian south coast. Off the Skager Rack, some seventy miles off Skagerack, numerous small cruisers of the Calliope class were sighted. Our cruisers at once pursued the enemy, which fled northward at highest speed.

IN ECHELON FORMATION.

"At 2.20 our cruisers sighted two enemy columns to the west, consisting of six vatian cruisers and a great number of small cruisers. The enemy passed towards the south and our ships, approaching to nineteen kilometres, opened very effective fire on the southern, southeastern corner, during the battle speed, attempted to destroy the cruisers and one destroyer were sunk.

"After half an hour's fighting heavy enemy reinforcements, later observed to be five vessels of the Queen Elizabeth class, were sighted in the north. Soon afterwards, the German main force entered the fight and the enemy at once turned north.

"The British commander, driving his ships at full speed, attempted to evade our extremely effective fire by taking an eastern direction. Our fleet followed at top speed the movements of the enemy in the course of this engaged of the fighting one cruiser of the Achilles or Shannon class and two destroyers were sunk. The number of other vessels suffered heavy damage.

"The battle against superior forces lasted until darkness fell. Besides numerous light detachments at least 25 British battleships, six battle cruisers and four armored cruisers engaged 16 German battleships, five battle cruisers, six older ships of the line and no armored cruisers.

"After dark our flotillas opened a night attack. During this attack several cruiser and torpedo boat engagements occured, resulting in the destruction of one battle cruiser, one cruiser of the Achilles class, probably two small cruisers and at least four destroyers. Six of the latter, including the new destroyer leaders Turbulent and Tipperary, were destroyed by the leading vessel of our high seas fleet.

"The British squadron of older battleships which hurried up from the south did not arrive until Thursday morning, after the conclusion of the battle, and returned without taking any part in the fighting or coming within sight of our main forces."

WAR SUMMARY

The naval battle of last Wednesday was still the principal war topic today; and the favorite angle of the discussion was: "How many ships did the Germans lose?

Those who believe the British Admiralty will say—18 ships. Those who believe the German Admiralty will say—9 ships (one old battleship, two light cruisers, six destroyers).

It is a straight out question of veracity. The British report that the Germans had admitted the loss of the dreadnought Westphalen is officially denied by Berlin. The Germans say all vessels not reported as lost or missing in the first communique have returned to port.

Editorial comment in even those newspapers which have been favorable to the allies, and expert comment from all sources except London, hold that the German losses were approximately as the Germans state them.

The battle may be summarized thus: The Germans smashed the British battle cruiser squadron, then fled at the approach of the heavy British fleet, and escaped without serious losses. The Germans inflicted the greatest loss; but the British control of the seas was entirely unimpaired, and the battle was as indecisive as the capture of a trench at Verdun.

German attacks at Verdun resulted in further small gains today, according to the early official statement. The French in a review of the past week's fighting admitted steady German gains.

The Germans have launched an offensive of indefinite proportions against the English, capturing some trenches.

The Austrian offensive against the Italians is halted, temporarily or permanently.

The French military command has formally annexed Salonica, putting it under French military rule. French and Bulgars are fighting along the border.

NEW DRIVE AGAINST FT. VAUX

By CHARLES F. BERTELLI.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, June 5.—German troops on the Verdun front are again attacking the French position at Fort Vaux.

The French War Office stated today that violent assaults were delivered last night during which the Germans used liquid fire.

All these attacks were repulsed.

The most desperate efforts are being made against the French positions around Fort Vaux, on the eastern side of the Meuse.

To the west of the river the Germans have continued their bombardment, shelling the French trenches with guns of all calibres.

The following is the text of the official statement:

"On the left bank of the Meuse there was an intermittent bombardment. East of the Meuse the artillery fire continued with extreme violence in the region of Thiaumont farm and Douaumont. The cannonade continued during the night their attacks against our positions in the region of Fleury and Damloup.

"Northeast of Fort Vaux repeated attacks by the enemy in the passage of Bois Fumin were completely checked by our fire.

"Fighting between the fort and the village of Damloup have been equally arrested.

"During night there was bloody fighting between the garrison at Fort Vaux and detachments of the enemy, who had succeeded in penetrating our positions by using large quantities of liquid fire. In spite of this our troops have prevented the adversary from making any progress.

"In the Vosges a surprise attack by the enemy west of Carspach has given them possession of three trench elements. Our counter attacks immediately drove the enemy from the trenches they occupied."

Allied Attacks Are Repulsed, Says Berlin.

By International News Service.

Berlin, via Sayville, June 5.—The repulse of British attacks near Ypres and French attacks in Champagne was announced by the German War Office today.

Between Damloup and Calliette Forest, on the Verdun front, fighting of unusual violence has been engaged. Further west in the region of Fleury, in Champagne, the Germans reconducting detachments entered enemy positions along the Yser, north of Arras, east of Albert and near Altkirch. Thirty French, twenty Belgian and thirty-five British were captured, as well as one mine thrower.

"East and Balkan fronts—There is nothing to report.

"Aviation—Air combats during May were very successful for us. The enemy lost in aerial battles forty-seven planes.

"Thirty-six were shot down from earth; nine landed involuntarily within our lines and two more totally destroyed.

"We lost eleven aeroplanes in air combats and five failed to return, making a total of sixteen.

AUSTRIANS DRIVEN BACK BY ITALIANS

Special to International News Service and London Telegram.

Rome, June 5.—The maximum effort of the Austrians was made against the plateaus of Arsiero and Asiago. The Austrians used nine divisions of reserves. The result was disastrous, it is said here.

The Italians succeeded in rapidly concentrating many new heavy guns and large masses of infantry on these plateaus, against which the Austrian offensive was shattered.

The Italian counter offensive began on the right wing and continued to be extended along the whole front. The Italian authorities have absolute confidence in the complete success of their counter offensive. The Austrian effort to invade Italy is regarded as a failure.

W. Murray Crane Actually Gives Out Interview

Chicago, June 5.

W. MURRAY CRANE, familiarly called "Uncle Murray," but not in his presence, has broken the silence that won him the title "The Sphinx of the Berkshires."

On his very nod depends the direction in which the Massachusetts delegates will jump. The following are his exact words:

"I am trying to get along with out saying anything."

OPEN SPLIT IN BAY STATE DELEGATION

By JOHN T. LAMBERT.

Detroit, June 5.—An open split in the Massachusetts delegation on the special train bound for Chicago today left the balance of power in the hands of W. Murray Crane.

John W. Weeks can secure a majority of the delegates only if Mr. Crane is willing to deliver them to him. This situation developed shortly after Governor McCall's friends began a vigorous campaign to get Weeks henchmen to stop at once the lobbying of delegates and refrain from opening the crate of Weeks buttons and literature that was loaded on the special train for distribution.

HOW THEY LINE UP.

This ultimatum disclosed the following alignment of the delegates:

1—Nine delegates are openly and definitely committed to the support of Weeks.

2—Eight delegates are either ready or inclined to vote for Governor McCall for President.

3—Four are pledged to vote for Colonel Roosevelt.

4—Two will do about what Henry Cabot Lodge wants them to do.

5—Eight will do the bidding of Mr. Crane.

6—The remaining and only member of the district delegates apparently not tied up with one of the three factions is Alexander McCallum of Springfield. Weeks' agents claim him, and others say he will jump when "Uncle Murray" cracks the whip. But McCallum still seems to remain neutral.

Former Congressman Butler Ames of Lowell, chief alternate-at-large, and others of Governor McCall's friends today are in a mood to secede. Mr. Ames left as soon as the train arrives at Chicago and requested, if necessary, that Crane throw his support to the Governor, if any "favorite son" tributes are allowed to be paid.

BEGAN IN BOSTON.

The split began in Boston when a crate of Weeks buttons and pamphlets was found to be pretty well established today that as a final stamp card the Crane planning on the presence of the colonel to win the day.

Word that he was coming was hoped for in many quarters.

ATTITUDE CHANGES.

The attitude of the Progressive leaders had changed today with the apparent waning of the Roosevelt strength.

George W. Perkins issued a statement declaring that he was "not willing to pay any price for harmony."

His statement follows:

"I am for harmony between the two conventions meeting in Chicago this week. I shall use every ounce of ability I have and every moment of the time, day and night, to bring it about, but not for one minute will I lose sight of the fact that you can pay too high a price for almost anything, and you certainly can pay too high a price for harmony.

"We could have had harmony with England in 1776 if we had paid the price England demanded. We could have had harmony in 1860 but we would have had no country as a result. We would have had no such glorious future as we had after both of those struggles.

"Now, I for one, am deeply imbued with the belief that we are facing just as momentous a struggle, with just as important questions to decide as existed in 1776 and 1860. These questions are internal and external.

"If we evade them, compromise or temporise with them they will simply come back to plague us in the immediate future and come back with greater force and virulence.

"This being my belief, I, for one, will not consent to any arrangement that is simply postponing the day of settlement. That isn't the American way. That is not what our grandfathers did; it is not what our fathers did; and we, he sons of those men, cannot afford to lower the standards we have inherited.

OF VAST IMPORTANCE.

The mighty struggle raging here this week is going to result in laying the foundations for a loftier Americanism than we have ever known; it is going to bring to this country a greater place among the nations of the world than it has ever had before, with an opportunity to be of more influence and render greater service to the world than ever before; for more modern economic conditions for our people than ever before, or it is going to lay the foundation for serious trouble and disruption and require our people to pass through days of serious trial and tribulations before they find their way out.

"I wish every American citizen who loves his country and wants to see it do its best and be at the head in the world affairs of the future could be here on the ground in Chicago this week and could lend his influence and his aid to give our country, as a result of the deliberations of these two conventions, leadership in the line.

The Perking warning was the first evidence of bitterness to date and brought home to the delegates to both conventions the fact that they are standing on very thin ice. It would not take much to revive all of the bitterness and enmities of four years ago.

RADICALS ANGERED.

Governor Johnson of California and the radicals who follow his lead, have been slowly becoming angered over their failure to make any impression on the "Old Guard."

Johnson personally has held all along that the Progressives should go right ahead and nominate the Colonel and then organize the Republicans take him or else go down to certain defeat.

Today he made no secret of his belief that he (Johnson) would not stand for any long wait to see what the Republicans were going to do.

The New York delegation has split almost equally over the candidacy of Root and Hughes. Governor Whitman continued to claim today that he had a safe majority of the delegates pledged to for Hughes, but Senator Wadsworth and Elton R. Brown, who were leading the fight for Root, declare that they will be able to cast their candidate will be in the lead.

CHAIRMAN HARDING ARRIVES.

Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio, who is to deliver the keynote speech at the Republican National Convention, arrived today and became one of the central figures in the pre-convention excitement.

Senator Harding absolutely refused to consider himself as even a remote possibility for the presidential nomination.

"I am for Senator Burton, and if the nomination goes to Ohio it will go to Burton," said Harding. "Of course, I am pledged to the favorite son and my friends, but I must insist that I be left out of the consideration of presidential possibilities."

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho and Senator Kenyon of Iowa put in an appearance today.

Borah believes that Justice Hughes will be the nominee.

CLAIM VICTORY FOR HUGHES AT CHICAGO

the Progressives to a straight out Republican, he can pick the nominee. He himself cannot have the nomination they assert.

The "Old Guard," which is in the saddle here as firmly as ever before, has decided that it will not accept the colonel. They do not desire to nominate Justice Hughes if it can be avoided. But today, following the arrival of many delegates, the Hughes sentiment has crystallized to such an extent that the Hughes men were preparing to go to the convention out of the control of the favorite son combination.

The men who are looking out for the interests of the justice, realize that Roosevelt may try at the last moment to stampede the convention to the colonel by playing one of the favorite sons against another. They are determined to prevent this if possible. They lent themselves to the movement, now admittedly successful, to kill off the colonel's chances with the justice.

But they will let the tables be turned on them now, and they intend keeping the justice at the front at all times. The Hughes men claim that they will have 298 votes in the first ballot. They refuse point blank to name these delegates, but if they can make good this claim on the first ballot, there will be a swing to the justice on the second ballot that will place him within reaching distance of the coveted prize.

The ultimatum issued by Hughes through his secretary in Washington today declaring that under no circumstances would he have anything to say as to what he stood until after the Progressive convention adjourns was a sharp shock to the Progressive leaders here. They had hoped that the authorized challenge of Harold. L. Ickes, declaring that Hughes was impossible of consideration by the Progressive convention because of his silence, would smoke the justice out. It was issued last night, but Mr. Hughes has declined to meet the issue that was raised and today still maintains his strategic advantage. As the Roosevelt party stated many of the supporters of the sake of Oyster Bay joined the forward thought:

"Oh, if Roosevelt were only here!"

ANXIETY APPARENT.

All of the Roosevelt plans were shrouded in secrecy but the anxious feeling all around the Roosevelt headquarters was plainly apparent.

John McGrath, the colonel's secretary, talked with his chief over the long distance telephone and explained the situation at length to him.

"The colonel is well," is all he would say after the the how pow.

Some of the Roosevelt supporters maintained an attitude of smug complaisancy and declared that "everything would come out all right."

Representative Augustus P. Gardner of Massachusetts, who led an unsuccessful fight for a Roosevelt delegation from his State, was working tirelessly but independently among the various delegations. He represented the Roosevelt men who fear trouble, and he was outspoken in his hope that the colonel would make a spectacular trip to Chicago, swing the convention with his accustomed enthusiasm and start a stampede that would eliminate all plans.

While the Roosevelt men were mysterious, the Hughes party was established today that as a final trump card they are planning on the presence of the colonel to win the day.

Word that he was coming was hoped for in many quarters.

ATTITUDE CHANGES.

The attitude of the Progressive leaders had changed today with the apparent waning of the Roosevelt strength.

George W. Perkins issued a statement declaring that he was "not willing to pay any price for harmony."

His statement follows:

"I am for harmony between the two conventions meeting in Chicago this week. I shall use every ounce of ability I have and every moment of the time, day and night, to bring it about, but not for one minute will I lose sight of the fact that you can pay too high a price for almost anything, and you certainly can pay too high a price for harmony.

"We could have had harmony with England in 1776 if we had paid the price England demanded. We could have had harmony in 1860 but we would have had no country as a result. We would have had no such glorious future as we had after both of those struggles.

"Now, I for one, am deeply imbued with the belief that we are facing just as momentous a struggle, with just as important questions to decide as existed in 1776 and 1860. These questions are internal and external.

"If we evade them, compromise or temporise with them they will simply come back to plague us in the immediate future and come back with greater force and virulence.

"This being my belief, I, for one, will not consent to any arrangement that is simply postponing the day of settlement. That isn't the American way. That is not what our grandfathers did; it is not what our fathers did; and we, he sons of those men, cannot afford to lower the standards we have inherited.

OF VAST IMPORTANCE.

The mighty struggle raging here this week is going to result in laying the foundations for a loftier Americanism than we have ever known; it is going to bring to this country a greater place among the nations of the world than it has ever had before, with an opportunity to be of more influence and render greater service to the world than ever before; for more modern economic conditions for our people than ever before, or it is going to lay the foundation for serious trouble and disruption and require our people to pass through days of serious trial and tribulations before they find their way out.

"I wish every American citizen who loves his country and wants to see it do its best and be at the head in the world affairs of the future could be here on the ground in Chicago this week and could lend his influence and his aid to give our country, as a result of the deliberations of these two conventions, leadership in the line.

The Perking warning was the first evidence of bitterness to date and brought home to the delegates to both conventions the fact that they are standing on very thin ice. It would not take much to revive all of the bitterness and enmities of four years ago.

RADICALS ANGERED.

Governor Johnson of California and the radicals who follow his lead, have been slowly becoming angered over their failure to make any impression on the "Old Guard."

Johnson personally has held all along that the Progressives should go right ahead and nominate the Colonel and then organize the Republicans take him or else go down to certain defeat.

Today he made no secret of his belief that he (Johnson) would not stand for any long wait to see what the Republicans were going to do.

The New York delegation has split almost equally over the candidacy of Root and Hughes. Governor Whitman continued to claim today that he had a safe majority of the delegates pledged to for Hughes, but Senator Wadsworth and Elton R. Brown, who were leading the fight for Root, declare that they will be able to cast their candidate will be in the lead.

CHAIRMAN HARDING ARRIVES.

Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio, who is to deliver the keynote speech at the Republican National Convention, arrived today and became one of the central figures in the pre-convention excitement.

Senator Harding absolutely refused to consider himself as even a remote possibility for the presidential nomination.

"I am for Senator Burton, and if the nomination goes to Ohio it will go to Burton," said Harding. "Of course, I am pledged to the favorite son and my friends, but I must insist that I be left out of the consideration of presidential possibilities."

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho and Senator Kenyon of Iowa put in an appearance today.

Borah believes that Justice Hughes will be the nominee.

WOMEN CALL ON THE G. O. P. FOR SUFFRAGE

By International News Service.

Chicago, May 5.—"Give us our rights or face political oblivion." That was the ultimatum enunciated today by the 3,000 delegates in attendance here upon the first woman's political convention of an organized character ever held in connection with a national nominating convention.

Every State is represented in the gathering now within the walls of the Auditorium Theatre tonight. The delegates from all of the States were received, but only the women who come from States where they can exercise the right of franchise will direct the proceedings.

The women made it plain that they were here to insist that the Republican National Convention recognise that the suffrage question is a real national issue and agree to submit to the people of the United States a constitutional amendment dealing with it.

Backed up by some four million votes, the women expected that at least they would receive consideration at the hands of the delegates to the Republican Convention heretofore denied them.

Before finally adjourning on Wednesday the women will adopt a platform and will call upon the Republican, Democratic and Socialist parties to write the essentials of that platform into their own declaration of principles.

Miss Blackwell Leads Women to Chicago

Headed by Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, president of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association, some fifty Massachusetts suffragists marched to the South Station today and took the 10 o'clock train for Chicago.

There they will do their part in working for a suffrage plank in the platform; and, failing that, they will try to drive home on the minds of assembled politicians the fact that the women of Massachusetts want suffrage.

Forty thousand women are expected to march in a suffrage parade on Wednesday, which is to show the Republicans the wisdom of putting a suffrage plank in their platform.

Over one-third of the votes necessary to elect a President are controlled by States where women vote, and this suffragists intend to force the delegates to remember.

The women in the parade at Chicago will wear white waists and skirts, black shoes, and white sailor hats with yellow bands.

At the close of the Chicago convention they will go to St. Louis, to appeal to the delegates at the Democratic convention.

COBB FINDS BOOMS MOSTLY HOLLOW ROAR

By IRVIN S. COBB.

Copyrighted, 1916, by Irvin S. Cobb.

Chicago, June 5.—Framing my dispatch for this day and date, I have sought the able, although posthumous, collaboration of a prominent member of the well-known Webster family of New England—no, Daniel was a Republican, or would have been had he lived until this time, but Noah wrote for all parties. He is dead, but his dictionary goes marching on. To him, then, have I turned for help.

In the sterling dictionary bearing his name I find for the short word "boom" the following array of definitions:

Noun—

1.—Long pole or spar, run out from various parts of a ship or other vessel, for the purpose of extending the bottom of particular sails.

2.—A strong iron chain, cable or line of spars bound together, extended across a river or the mouth of a harbor, to obstruct navigation or passage.

3.—A pole set up as a mark to direct seamen how to keep the channel in shallow water.

4.—A roar, as of waves or cannon. The hollow cry of the bittern.

5.—The space on the upper deck of a ship between the fore and main mast, where spare spars, etc., are stowed.

Verb—

To make a hollow sound or roar.

How vivid is the English language!

Here, in Webster, we discover that a boom is a hollow roar; which exactly describes most of the booms projected to the attention of the delegates to the Republican National Convention now assembling.

FINDS MANY BOOMS ARE RATHER HOLLOW.

I find many are so hollow you can see right through them and back again. We find, too, that a boom is a thing used in connection with a device for catching the wind. That also applies. If it were not for wind, there would be but few booms here today in Chicago, whereas they are present in numbers amounting to a great multitude.

Also a boom is a space on an upper deck, as may be noted. There is any amount of space in the upper decks of some of these booms. In fact, on the upper deck they are all a space wide, deep, echoing reaches of space and nothing else. A boom may be used, it seems, either to obstruct navigation, which is what some of the Hughes rooters are despitefully saying about the Roosevelt boom, or, again, it may be employed as a mark to seafaring persons to show them the channel in shallow water.

The water is exceedingly shallow under divers booms here, and, by the same token, the boomers for this boom or that stand ever ready to direct the casual, stray, uninstructed delegate into the right channel. In particular this applies to the attitude of certain paid boomists.

The late Noah Webster certainly knew how to cover a proposition in all its slants, twists and contingencies. You have to hand it to him. This is a great day for booms. Especially is it a great day for booms at the Congress Hotel, where the atmosphere appears to be highly suitable to the development of delicate and perishable forms of animal life.

I went up stairs to call upon that little orphan Annie of a boom which somebody out in Michigan laid on the doorstep of Mr. Henry Ford of Detroit. The doors were closed, and no sound of a piping little voice filtered through the keyhole.

Evidently the devoted nurse had carried the foundling out to get the air.

Senator Du Pont's boom wasn't in to callers, either. The rumor was that its parent had put a strap around it and carried it along with him when he went to luncheon.

But all the other established young booms—including the Sherman boom, the Burten boom, the Fairbanks boom, the Drumbaigh boom, the Cummins boom, the Root boom and the rest of the boomlets—were reported to be imbibing nourishment at regular intervals and learning to say "Da, da, da."

And then, on top of all this from time to time new booms sprang up, tender and verdant, even as the little flowerlets of the field.

For example, alone came E. Randolph Woods from Pennsylvania and declared himself for the Republican nomination on the Pacifist idea.

At a moment of comparative quiet in the boom business one of the newspapermen happened upon a new announcement. It had just been fixed to a pillar in the lobby by a bell-hop. It stated in black letters that a gentleman of a certain name—call him Blank for short—had opened headquarters on the third floor.

THIS LOOKED LIKE ANOTHER BOOM BUT—

Having made this interesting discovery the newspapers carried the word to several of his associates and they decided in a body to go upstairs and ascertain for publication a few spicy details concerning the views, ambitions and personality of the newest entrant in the field.

None of them had ever heard of him before, but, for that matter, quite a number of the candidates, after the nominations, are strangers to most of the newspaper crowd.

In a room on the third floor they found a sprucely dressed gentleman superintending the rigging up of some board trestles, from which circumstance they deduced, at first glance, that he was arranging counters with a view to serving liquid entertainment for thirsty delegates. He paused in his task and welcomed the visitors.

But it turned out that he was not the owner of a boom. He was not intending to run for President. He wasn't intending to run even, for Vice-President. He was selling neckwear for an Eastern concern, and he was merely engaged in fitting out a sample room.

BIG CHANCE FOR DARK HORSE

By CHAMP CLARK,

Speaker of the National House of Representatives.

Many are called and few are chosen, is as true in politics as in religion. Especially does this saying apply to the present Republican Presidential situation.

There have been conventions in which there was a multiplicity of candidates. For instance, in 1880 and in 1888. In 1880, when the memorable fight took place about nominating General Grant for a third term, and in 1888, when, out of a large field of candidates and after a long fight, General Benjamin Harrison was nominated.

There was also a surfeit of candidates when Horace Greeley was nominated at Cincinnati, in 1872, but there has not been such a number seeking a Presidential nomination at any other convention in the history of the country as are candidates now.

OUTCOME IS A GUESS.

And opinion on the outcome is pure and unadulterated guesswork. Nevertheless, and notwithstanding, as the AMERICAN has solicited my opinion, I will give it.

It may be stated, without fear of successful contradiction, that every instrument of internecine warfare known to the oldest campaigners will be brought into play in the great city by the lake. The town is full of favorite sons and the stables full of dark horses.

In Chicago in 1880, the cry of the stalwarts was "The Old Commander." In the other camp the cry was, "Anything to beat Grant!"

At Chicago a crowd of delegates are yelling, "Anything to beat Roosevelt!"

While the masses of the Republicans are bellowing, "Give us Teddy," another crowd of delegates, approximating a majority, are whooping it up for Hughes. Still another crowd are shouting for various favorite sons.

FAVORITE SONS A FACTOR.

Of course if Roosevelt is in the lead these favorite son troops will fight for Hughes up to a certain point, and if Hughes is in the lead these same favorite son troops will fight for Roosevelt.

Now suppose a case. Suppose the favorite son contingent succeed in defeating both Hughes and Roosevelt, then what? Chaos or a dark horse.

I have believed for a good long time that Roosevelt would be nominated.

The reason that I had a notion that Roosevelt would be nominated is that Spring, Summer and Fall I made speeches and lectured in thirty-one States on the Pacific to the Atlantic, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, in which my pet reference in my speeches and lectures to Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson, in every Republican audience Roosevelt's name was applauded.

SAYS HUGHES WOULD ACCEPT.

My own judgment is that if the rank and file of the Republicans knew what I believe to be true—that Mr. Justice Hughes would accept the nomination if it were tendered to him—he would be nominated. He has very few antagonisms, at least not so many as those which Colonel Roosevelt has provoked for himself.

The very fact that he has very little political record, or none at all, on the questions which have been agitating the public for six months is a positive advantage to him.

HIGGINSON FOR ANY MAN BUT WILSON

Detroit, Mich., June 5.—Major Henry L. Higginson, the Boston financier, was veteran and vigorous advocate of preparedness, today expressed the hope that the Republican national convention will nominate a candidate who will defeat Woodrow Wilson for President at the November election. Major Higginson is speeding on with the Massachusetts party to Chicago, where he expects to witness the fruition of his hope.

"I voted for Wilson four years ago but I will not vote for him again," said Major Higginson. He added:

Wilson hasn't got the backbone. Polished notes sound nice but they don't get us anywhere.

I will vote for any man the Republican party nominates rather than vote for Wilson.

After this war is over there will be a battle for commercial supremacy.

The administration of the tariff should be placed in charge of a competent man. Roosevelt has the best experience.

It would be dangerous to choose a dark horse. They ought to nominate a man who has definite policies.

I don't look upon Hughes as a dark horse. He was Governor of New York State and we had a chance to find out what he stands for in public life.

I would be glad to vote for Hughes, in fact, I'll vote for anybody against Wilson. Wilson has surrounded himself with very weak men. He thinks he knows it all and he won't take advice.

I think Roosevelt will be nominated.

Delegates, Noise and Smoke Filling Hotels

By DAMON RUNYON.

Chicago, June 5.—They are paging through megaphones around the Chicago hotels, the noise exuded by the incoming delegates, candidates, statesmen, Senators, Congressmen, justices of the peace, authors, actors, coroners, county chairmen, taxpayers and peasants, connected with the impending Republican National Convention, having gradually grown to such volume that no ordinary two-cylindered bell boy could make his voice audible.

The lads had been going great guns in the face of strong opposition. They were able to make their naked tones heard in their calls at a distance of but ten feet. Several of the hardier youths claim a record of twelve feet, offhand paging, but about the time another New York train got in all the hops succumbed and took to megaphones.

NAMES PROVE TOO MUCH.

It is alleged that one boy might have kept going indefinitely had not the clerk handed him the name of delegate Eufracio Gallegas, of New Mexico and Johannes C. Berendsen of California, for joint paging. Then he had to quit, which was a great pity, as any boy who was able to get around with his mouth open for hours and survive the gaseous turbulence and conversational fumes which prevail in the hotel lobbies was entitled to high honor.

Were this not a political essay, it would probably be devoted to conjecture as to the places where they make all the cigars being smoked by the various factions here present; to the terrain of the country where the places are situate; to the climate, and to the habits and customs of the people, with some speculation as to how they make those same cigars so bad.

They are really one of the features of the Republican gathering—those cigars—and should have special attention, particularly from the sanitary authorities.

Next to the cigars the chief characteristic of the assemblage is the noise referred to above.

NOTHING BUT NOISE.

Old Bedlam was probably a deaf and dumb asylum compared to certain sections of Chicago at this writing. The only real quiet places in the neighborhoods were the community graveyards, and that spot immediately adjacent to Henry Ford's presidential boom.

Mr. Ford's presidential boom has never been especially virulent since this gathering set in, and now it is lying so cold and still, and yet withal so life-like, that many people fear the worst.

Bainbridge Colby, on arriving in town, announced that, in his opinion, the Hughes boom is affected by low viability, which statement was passed around the hotels as the best line that has yet been developed. The authorship thereof was duly credited to Mr. Colby, but presently scoffers arose who said that it wasn't such a much of a line of a line at that, and that even if it was, Mr. Colby hadn't said it first that he hadn't thought it the right sort of line to hand. We remain wholly neutral in the controversy giving the line for what it is worth.

The Roosevelt boom, which has been one of the really virile booms of the period, has now ceased straining at the leash to some extent. This is not to suggest that it is wholly quiescent but it is less uproarious.

The old boys who sit back in the corners are commencing to give it the Nosh.

You know that one, of course. The one about the fellow who passed to that other shore and got to telling the folks there about the Johnstown flood, while an old chap with long, white whiskers sat back in a corner punctuating the story tellers' remarks with contemptuous "Huhs."

"You never saw so much water in your whole life," declared the narrator, with a thrill in every word.

"Huh," grunted the old man back in the corner.

"Say," demanded the tale teller, indignantly, "who is that old fossil over there who keeps sneering at me."

"That," said one of his auditors, gently, "is Noah."

The old boy who got back in the corner was commencing to give it the Noah.

COLONEL "UNPREPARED."

It might have been expected that an apostle of preparedness would be prepared forty ways from the jack for such an occasion as this, and yet it has been discovered that Mr. Roosevelt's friends brought his booms along to these parts with a singular lack of preparation. It has scarcely been groomed, let alone conditioned.

The result has been of some profit to the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies, for every moment or so some one connected with the Roosevelt camp dashes out and sends a night letter to some one else.

The fact that some of these night letters go to men already pledged to some other candidate, and frequently refer to a delegate already otherwise bound, seems to make no difference to the senders. All this unprecedentedness brings saltine accents into the voice of old-time followers of Roosevelt, whenever they mention the matter.

There will be plenty of platforms on the market today.

Senator Lodge is arriving with a hand-raised effigy which is said to be thoroughly demonstrated, while Senator Borah looms athwart the horizon as the poet says, with another, which has not been curried below the knees.

Neither of these platforms will be adopted by the convention. That is the sad thing about platforms. A man sits up occupied nights building himself a platform to be presented to some convention, and then the convention doesn't use the platform, so the fellow has all his work for nothing.

SIDELIGHTS ON REPUBLICAN BATTLE LINE

The favorite sons of the favorite sons came to Chicago today to work for their dads. Three sons of former Vice-President Fairbanks circulated among the delegates and the son of Senator John W. Weeks took charge of his father's headquarters. Alex Theodore Roosevelt Jr., was in the melee.

William A. Steel of Cordova, Alaska, believes he has the long distance record among the newspaper men here for the convention. He is editor of the Daily Alaskan at Cordova, and the leader at Chitka, Alaska, and manager of the Alaska Press Association.

Victor Rosewater of Nebraska is one of the few of the Old Guard of 1912 "steam-roller days" who does not mince words.

"Who will be nominated?" he was asked.

ORPET SEEKS YOUNG BLOOD ON JURY

Waukegan, Ill., June 5.—Young Will Orpet, university student on trial for the murder of his sweetheart, Marian Lambert, is clamoring for youth on the jury. Age, so evident in the jury box, is hanging over him like the sword of Damocles.

He admitted as much in a conference with his attorneys here today, the conference serving to end the monotony of his Sabbath day in a cell. He pleaded with them to use the fifth remaining peremptory challenges as a constant call for youth, youth, youth. It was evident that State's Attorney Lindy, wily manoeuvring for retention of gray-haired fathers of daughters and for the speedy departure of young swains with more recent experience with sweethearts, has been disturbing to the defendant.

Of the eight men permanently seated in the jury box today all but one are married men with families, and many of them are fathers of daughters of the same age of Marian Lambert. And it was the State's evident effort to get four more of the same that angered Orpet.

During Saturday's session when the prosecutor used one of his peremptory challenges to dislodge Fred Mack, a young garage owner, who had successfully hurdled all barriers set up by the lawyers, the defendant actually squirmed.

And the very next candidate for the vacant chair in the jury box was of the gray haired, thin fisted type.

Yes, he was married, and he had daughters of ages all around the age of pretty Marian Lambert, the high school girl who met her death in Helms Woods, following a secret tryst with Orpet.

The State coaxed the father with little questions. Then it was that Young Orpet busied himself penning a note to his attorneys.

"Could I have a conference with you some time before court convenes Monday morning?" was the substance of his request.

WANTS YOUTH ON JURY.

His request was granted. The conference was held and the attorneys heard a lot of Orpet's ideas on what the qualification of jurors should be.

They agreed that youth was desirable.

"Use the five remaining peremptory challenges to get some young men on that jury," he pleaded. "It's my life and liberty that's at stake, and it seems to me that young men can more fully appreciate my position."

He was not blaming his attorneys. He said he simply wanted to urge them to combat as vigorously as possible the State's attempt to flood the jury box with men of families. He could see what the State's game is.

Mrs. Mary E. Merwin, author of the affidavit which told of fixed jurors attempting to get upon the jury, has disappeared on the heels of Judge Donnelly's demand that she be produced in court.

"Bring this witness into court because purjury has been committed here," was the court's injunction Saturday, when counsel for the defence produced Mrs. Merwin's affidavit referring particularly to her own son, Lewis Merwin.

Investigation today disclosed the fact that Mrs. Merwin will not appear in court to testify today or any other day within the next two weeks. For some reason she left the home in Area, Ill., and the State, for two weeks at least.

It is her own son, Lewis Merwin, who stands charged with trying to "stick" on the jury, despite a fixed opinion as to Orpet's guilt, who admitted that his mother would not return for two weeks. He would not say why, or where she had gone.

ANCIENTS HOLD ELECTION ON COMMON

The Ancients marked their 278th anniversary today with a parade, church service at the Old South, drumhead election on the Common and the annual banquet at the Copley-Plaza.

The members of the company assembled at Faneuil Hall for an early lunch. At 1 o'clock line was formed on South Market street, when Lieutenant George B. Washburn, adjutant, turned the command over to Captain Harry Hamilton.

With the Salem Cadet band leading the six companies of infantry, and the First Corps Cadet band leading six companies of artillery, the column marched along Washington, School, Beacon, School, Washington, West, Tremont, Boylston streets to the Old South Church, where the Rev. Dr. A. A. Berle delivered the annual sermon.

On the march from the armory the command had a platoon from C battery of Lawrence in its rear, the guns firing the innumerable salutes to the Governor and to the elected officers on the Common. Arriving on the Common, a review to the Governor took place, and then followed the drumhead election of officers. This ceremony over, the company marches to the Copley-Plaza, where, at 7 o'clock, the annual banquet will take place.

It is expected that some 800 members and guests will take part in this, the closing function of the day. In the absence from the feast of Governor McCall, the toast to the Commonwealth will be replied to by the Lieutenant-Governor.

The pimples were large, red and hard, and the most of the time in blotches from my face to my chest. My face was all disfigured and would itch and burn so that I would stay awake hours at night.

"This went on for seven and a half months as a friend advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a free sample and it started to heal me so I bought three cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Ointment, and they healed me." SANITOL
WEEK
JULY 2ND

The boys came out of the jail where they have been confined since Saturday, their faces wreathed in smiles, and boisterously greeted friends who stood in the crowd that had gathered. Shaw spoke to a number of boys of his acquaintance, and both willingly posed for the newspaper photographers. As they climbed into the automobile which was to take them to the Bridgewater State Hospital for the Criminal Insane.

Shaw is a juvenile, and would therefore be confined for life, as is Jesse Pomeroy.

Just as the case against the two Melrose boys was crumbling, Mrs. Fannie Lakey of No. 39 Central avenue, Malden, came forward to declare that she saw the boys hurrying past her house about 10 o'clock last Thursday morning, the day of the tragedy.

Mrs. Lakey frees the time because she was expecting visitors. And she picked out Harold Mead and Harold Shaw in the cell room in the basement of Melrose City Hall as the ones she saw hurrying away from the scene of the murder.

POINTS OUT MEAD AND SHAW.

To make doubly sure, Chief of Police George H. Kerr placed two other boys in the cell with the prisoners, before Mrs. Lasky went into the basement with the officers. From the row of four boys, Mrs. Lasky, without hesitation, pointed to Mead and Shaw.

This was the biggest development since the boys were arrested in Boston, Saturday, while attempting to sign on deck hands on the first steamship sailing for Liverpool.

Other developments in the Melrose mystery today were:

Arrest in absence of blood stains on boys' clothes;

Medical testimony tending to eliminate them;

Corroboration by towboat office men of boys' alibi;

Assertions by John E. Pratt, that he saw them board a trolley car in Lebanon street at 7 o'clock the morning of the murder.

Claim by Mrs. John McDonald that they passed her home late Thursday afternoon.

Confirmation of Shaw's claim that he called at the home of Mrs. George Grover; and Suspicion growing against two other persons.

Mrs. Laskey's entry into the case caused a stir. She reported at police headquarters by two patrolmen in a police automobile, and was met in an automobile. Mrs. Laskey is a slender young woman. She wore a black and white checked suit and a red hat. She is a brunette. She said:

"Last Thursday morning, about 9 o'clock, I saw two boys, one taller than the other and both wearing caps, busy themselves across Broadway and proceed up Fuller road, in the direction of Swain's Pond.

WERE IN A HURRY.

"I did not know them but could easily identify them. At 10 o'clock I saw the same two boys hurrying back past my house. In their haste they cut across my yard and through the woods. The first time I saw them they were running, looking through the window, but when they cut across my yard I was in the rear of the yard.

"I mentioned it to persons in the house and decided not to let the children out. I did not hear of the murder until late that day. I am sure it was Thursday because I expected visitors.

"Four words may play a part in dispelling the mystery that clouds the attending murder of little 'Tootsie' Wakelin.

These words are:

"I want to die."

They were muttered over and over again by Harold, better known as "Dooley," Mead, as he was being examined at the Hanover street police station in Boston and "mugged" and measured at Pemberton Square and driven through a pelting rain in an open automobile from Boston to Melrose, shackled to his fellow-adventurer, Harold Shaw.

HEARD MEAD SAY IT.

As AMERICAN reporter rode with the boy prisoners as the guest of Chief of Police George E. Kerr of Melrose and talked with both and heard Mead say in a thin voice that resembled a whine:

"I don't care; I'm not afraid; I want to die!" he was asked.

"Why should a boy as young as you want to die?" I asked him.

Mead looked up with a sickly grin and his beads of eyes set close. The large nose stopped their internal blinking. Then he hung his head so low that the visor of his dripping cap hid his face altogether.

"Why do you want to die, Mead?" he was asked.

"'Cause I do, that's all."

"Is that why you and Shaw were anxious to go to Europe?"

"We wanted to go to France and work, only they came and took us."

"Why, France? Were you thinking of the war and the trenches?"

"Yes. The trenches. That's a good place to die."

He grinned again and hung his head and then mentioned that he wished he had a cigarette and mumbled, "I want to die."

He fingered the arm that was locked to Shaw's and said, "Say, Hal, this guy running the car will hit one of these Elevated posts if he isn't careful."

"Did you know the little Wakelin girl, Mead?" he was asked.

"Tootie Wakelin? Sure."

"Did she know your name?"

"I don't know."

SNAPPED AT MEAD.

Shaw sat between Mead and Chief Kerr on the back seat and listened. His eyes and ears did not miss a thing. But he was solemn and showed his displeasure at what Mead was mumbling. Shaw had stubbornly refused to make a statement to the Boston police, but midway between Boston and Melrose he lost his temper with Mead and suddenly flared.

"Here you, Harold! You tell the truth. You've been telling lies. You know you're lying. Why don't you come out with the truth? If you don't tell what I know?"

"Why don't you, Shaw?" broke in Chief Kerr. "If Mead won't tell, why don't you? There is nothing to stop you. But you don't have to say anything. What you say can be used against you. All I want is the truth. If as you say Mead is telling a lie tell me with the truth yourself, and if we can back up your statements you shall go free.

"Nobody wants to harm either of you. We simply want to find out who killed Tootsie Wakelin. If you can help us, speak up."

"TOOK 7 O'CLOCK CAR."

"Well, I will," said Shaw. It's true Harold Mead and I spent out Wednesday night. We slept on a horse blanket on the hill near Swain's Pond.

"We went up and saw a crowd where the body had been, and hung around. I met my father coming from work. I told him about the pea jacket and he told me to throw it away, and I did. Friday morning I got $3 from my mother. I told her we were to get a job on a tug. I had been thinking of going to sea some time.

"Harold and I went to Boston early Friday morning and hung around ship agencies most of the day. Friday night we spent in the park in City square, Charlestown. We ate in restaurants. The food we had on us hill after waking up Thursday morning we bought in a store before we went there. We had cakes.

"Friday morning we saw in the papers that they were looking for two fellows boys and we supposed it was us. We went to the agencies along the waterfront and saw men who seemed to be policemen watching.

"We were in the agents' on Commercial street when a cop came. Why did I run? I thought they wanted us for stealing. That's all I know. Mead knows he's lying and getting us both in bad when he says we saw Tootsie Wakelin Thursday. We didn't see her that day at all and he knows it."

Chief Kerr and Patrolman Doherty were visited the Ripley School today to ask the children if what Mead says about walking home daily for more than a week with Tootsie is true. Chemical tests of clothing were also to be made.

M'CALL ISSUES PROCLAMATION FOR FLAG DAY

Governor McCall today set aside Wednesday June 14 as Flag Day. In his proclamation he says:

"As provided by Chapter ' of the Resolves of 1911 I hereby see apart June 14, 1916, as Flag Day, and make proclamation that the day be observed by the people of the Commonwealth in the display of the Flag and in such other ways as shall be in harmony with the general character of the day.

"The flag is the symbol of the nation. It represents what we are and what we hope to be. It stands for freedom and good government at home and it equally stands for international justice and the recognition of the rights of other nations whether they are great or weak. It should be especially the symbol of power when the rights of American citizens are invaded and the symbol of justice when encroachments are threatened upon the rights of weaker nations.

"If we respect ourselves and thereby respect the rights of others, our flag will be the symbol of respect and confidence among the nations. We reverence the flag because reverence is the beginning of obedience and obedience is the foundation of character."

CHAMBER PLAN TO SOLVE LABOR PROBLEM

The special Committee on Irregular Employment of the Boston Chamber of Commerce has recommended a public labor exchange that would primarily seek to bring together the right man and the right job.

It is suggested by the committee in its report that such a public exchange should be established in the city of Boston and be under the supervision and control of a board of directors to be selected from representatives of various commercial and industrial organizations in and near Boston.

It is believed that a better organization of the labor market will reduce the period between jobs and enable the workman to dovetail his jobs when necessary, so as to minimize the periods of unemployment.

How Nuxated Iron Helped Me To Whip Frank Moran

Jess Willard Tells Secret of His Easy Victory. Also reveals hitherto untold secret of his great triumph over Jack Johnson; Says Iron is Greatest of all Strength Builders

Ordinary Nuxated Iron will often increase the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 200 per cent. in two weeks' time.

SPECIAL NOTE.—Dr. R. Sauer, a well known physician who has studied widely in both this country and Europe, has investigated into the real truth to make a thorough investigation into the real secret of the great Jess Willard's strength and endurance and the marvelous value of nuxated iron as a strength builder.

NEW YORK.—Upon being interviewed at his apartment in the Colonial Hotel, Mr. Willard said: "Yes, I have a chemist with me to study the value of different foods and provide me with the proper foods to produce great strength and endurance, both of which are so necessary in the prize ring. On his recommendation I have often taken nuxated iron, and I have particularly noticed the free use of iron by all those who wish to obtain great physical and mental power. Without it I am sure that I should never have been able to whip Jack Johnson so completely and easily as I did, and while training for my fight with Frank Moran, I regularly took nuxated iron, and I am certain that it was a most important factor in my winning the fight so easily." Continuing, Dr. Sauer said: "Mr. Willard's case is only one of hundreds which I could cite from my own personal experience which proves conclusively the astonishing power of nuxated iron to restore strength and vitality even in most complicated chronic conditions."

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old, and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man—in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret he said was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 45 exceptional and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more or less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who are ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in this proper form. And this after they had in some cases been suffering for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

Many an athlete or prize fighter has won fame and glory for the reason he secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he entered into the affray, while many another has gone to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.—E. Sauer, M. D.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and which is unquestionably the most widely prescribed and used iron tonic by physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach, on the contrary, is quickly helpful to nearly all forms of indigestion as well as to nervousness and run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all druggists.—Advertisement.

I consider that plenty of iron in my blood is the secret of my great strength, power and endurance.

A Card of Thanks

We heartily thank the Sixty Thousand (60,000) women of Massachusetts who SIGNED THE PETITION AGAINST THE PASSING OF THE ANTI-TRADING STAMP BILL. We have no doubt that Five Hundred Thousand (500,000) would have signed if they had been given the opportunity. We estimate that there are over Five Hundred Thousand (500,000) persons in Massachusetts collecting Merchants Legal Stamps, and last year these collectors received discounts of

$715,000 in Merchandise, and
274,000 in Cash
$989,000 total for the Legal Stamps they collected.

Our competitors and others have made persistent efforts to put us out of business. They have failed. The idea of legislating competition out of existence is fundamentally wrong. The right and freedom of the merchants to do business in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts remains unimpaired.

ROOKIES DUE IN PLATTSBURG TODAY

The AMERICAN has sent Willard H. Davis to the citizens' camp at Plattsburg to tell how Boston and other New England citizens are training to help defend this nation efficiently in case of war. The preparedness parades throughout the country have shown that the nation is aroused at last to the necessity of being prepared. It is today the one big important issue in the nation. Mr. Davis will tell from day to day how the citizens are working to learn how to defend the nation and to lead others in its defense.

By WILLARD H. DAVIS.
Staff Correspondent of the American.

Burlington, Vt., June 5.—Four hundred strong, all "in the pink of condition," the first contingent from New England, bound for Plattsburg, the citizen training camp, arrived here at 6.30 a. m. today, right on schedule time. Everybody aboard the ten sleepers reported a "fairly comfortable" night with the exception of a few bumps which are bound to occur even on the best regulated railroads.

By noontime this same "four hundred" (and they are well named) will be residents of the khaki-colored village just outside the town of Plattsburg. Shortly after the train had rolled into the lumber yards of Burlington it was a case of sex who got to the "dinky" little wash room in the further end of the sleeper first.

ROOKIES DINE IN STYLE.

If some of the boys can dig a trench like they dug into that wash-room, and into my ribs, all well and good. Their "tubbin" and "change of linen" over, out they piled onto the platform. The sun was well up, the air bracing, and everybody was full of "pep." It was a typical Plattsburg morning.

With bags to the right of them, bags to the left of them, on drove the "four hundred" to the hotel on top of the hill. The breakfast, a sumptuous affair, was enjoyed after the climb, rest assured.

After an hour of lounging and smoking the start for the boat which was to convey the citizen soldiery across Lake Champlain to Plattsburg was started.

The North Station, just before the Plattsburg Special pulled out presented a stirring sight. In a way it seemed rather a serious atmosphere, yet of course there was plenty of merriment and jolly scenes. The men considered the trip too picnic.

PARTY IS VARIED ONE.

They are spending their money, and giving their valuable time, for it is valuable time for bankers, lawyers, instructors, officials of corporations, and men from all walks of life. They are giving it for a purpose—to remedy the statement so often made—that United States is unprepared. They are out to stifle that opinion.

However, as the "Caterpillar" engine snorted out of the shed at 8 o'clock, sweethearts, mothers, sisters, fathers, their cousins, their sisters and their aunts, were right on hand to say good-bye and wish the boys well.

After the train was underway the party quieted down somewhat. Most of the men pondered over instruction books, maps, and material pertaining to military affairs. The European war was settled three times to my knowledge, once by "George" (all porters are called George) who advised us to "re-tiyah."

Looking the contingent over there is indeed somewhat of a mixture. It includes lawyers, bankers, city officials, prominent politicians, Harvard instructors, students, and "grads," some are far from "soldierly-looking" others look the part, some have baggage enough to start a musical comedy, others are without any.

EQUIPPED FOR BUSINESS.

The majority of the "rookies" are togged out "to kill." The older men, however, travel "light," smoke considerable and talk "Preparedness."

The official "kit," which all should have, includes: Two pairs of marching shoes, well broken in; two pairs of olive-colored breeches, pair of leggings, two olive-drab shirts, campaign hat and cord and military coat. They were also directed to bring along toilet articles, soap, shaving articles, talcum powder, matches, tobacco, pencils, money, string, a pocket knife, notebook and pencils, and a "housewife" (by way of explanation, a housewife is a sewing outfit, needles, thread, thimble and the like).

The town here is jammed to the limit. The chief hotel is "booked for the Summer." The stores are doing a rushing business. Everybody's happy, and according to Gerald Connolly, the business agent for the crowd, that's one of the essential things. Gerald is as popular as ever and just as capable at handling the "rookies," which is no small job.

SOME OF THE ROOKIES.

Some of the most prominent men who are in the party are:

Samuel Cabot, head of the Samuel Cabot Company, Inc., manufacturing chemists; Meyer Bloomfield, social worker; Thomas S. Bradlee of Nahant, William H. Eaton of Pittsfield of the Eaton, Crane and Pike Company, paper manufacturers; Homer St. Gaudens of Windsor, Vt., from a family of famous sculptors and literary workers; Sinclair Kennedy, the author, of Brookline; Ellerton James, lawyer; S. Parkman, Shaw, Jr., secretary of the Old Colony Trust Company; Jeremiah Smith, Jr., attorney; Norbert Wiener, son of Professor Wiener of Harvard, and Professor William E. Hocking of Harvard.

SAN FRANCISCO HAS WATERFRONT BLAZE

San Francisco, June 5.—A new concrete pier and 6,000 tons of freight, which had been unloaded from the Shinyo No. 2, a Japanese liner, were destroyed by a spectacular waterfront blaze of unknown origin.

The Shinyo and the Governor Irbe, a freighter, which were tied to the burning pier, were slightly damaged before they got out of the fire's reach. No lives were lost. The loss is estimated at $750,000.

Rudolph in Today's Game

Braves Sadly Lack Hits

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

Manager Stallings will be back on the bench this afternoon, the Braves Joining Evers will be at second after a two days' rest and with an even break as the record of the present series with the Cubs, the Miracle Man should be able to win. While only a guess, it looks as if Rudolph would do the pitching, and as the Cubs are not driving the ball into the Charles River, this should spell victory.

Speaking of hitting reminds me that the Braves haven't done any all this season for timely work. They still lack the punch that means ball games. Since they took the end game from the Dodgers the pitching staff looks to be in better condition than at any time this season. But the power of the team as a hitting organization remains about the same, even with Maggie back in the lineup. The problem of an outfield is yet unsolved. The present squad of carden tenders do not appear to be able to "hit their weight."

The team has lost many close games this season, appearing to be in the position of a club that just cannot do the right thing. Some call it getting the worst of the breaks. Whatever it is, the club is not in any too strong a position, with the Western clubs close upon their heels.

WESTERN CLUBS CLOSE.

Any follower of the sport who imagines for an instant that the first division will be held by the present clubs throughout and at the close of the National League season is about to experience an awakening. The margin that separates the fourth club from the sixth is so slight it could fade away in a few days.

The Giants have found themselves and are on their way to the top to stick when the time comes for McGraw to cut loose his men. He showed what they could do in the West and the Western clubs cannot expect to say much playing at home upon their home field. By this I do not mean that New York is to have any runaway race. There are a couple of clubs that look strong enough to stick along for some time, and in making it hard work for the Giants to get a very good lead, still to make the race to last to the end won by McGraw, with second place resting between Philadelphia and Brooklyn.

"Rebel" has a good ball club with plenty of fighting spirit and it is in a pretty good position to stand a few hard knocks and then come back. This is going it up to the Braves to attack in fourth place and in my judgment there isn't enough in the hitting strength to warrant this, nor is the pitching staff likely to so develop that it can carry the team along.

SOX WEAKENED.

Manager Carrigan and his World's Champions are in the fight for fourth place, where they are having trouble due to the fact that Hooper is not playing in right field. No one man makes or breaks a ball club, but one man's presence can help or hinder the work and the Sox have been hurt. That is the answer to the present problem. The Champions have had to take departure for the West had pulled themselves out of a feeling that they were going to get a look in on them. They saw Hooper playing great ball and the old fighting spirit was there trimmed the Senators nicely.

In this series Harry was hurt and once more the sentimental side of the game made itself manifest. It was certainly a piece of the hardest kind of luck and the team will have to grin and bear it until this clever player gets back into the game. The club will in my opinion, come through the Western trip with fighting colors. The pitching is found to improve and the club will hit. This combination once more in

New London slugged its way into the lead in team batting in the Eastern League last week, replacing the Springfield nine which had been leading the procession in swatting for the last three weeks. The Planters raked eight points to their former figures and are now scoring an average of .262.

The Green Sox did not hit with their usual consistency, losing 11 points. They are three points behind the leader. Lynn moved back a peg to make room for the Springfield team. The Shoemakers, who were second in batting last week, are now third. They have an average of .248, which is only two more points than Worcester.

Splendid pitching and consistent fielding featured the games this week. Only four clubs, New London, Lowell, New Haven and Bridgeport, gained in batting. Worcester did not gain or lose.

Portland and Hartford were the only teams that lost ground in fielding. Lynn, Worcester, New Haven and Bridgeport all made slight gains and the rest of the teams retained the same figures they sported when the last table of figures was issued. Lawrence with an average of .960 remains the best fielding club. New London is second in this respect. The Planters have an average of .959.

Springfield has made the greatest number of runs, 143, leads in making hits, has registered the largest number of total bases. It also leads in doubles, having knocked out 52. Lynn, New London and Bridgeport with nine each, lead in making triples and Springfield and Lawrence have registered the greatest number of circuit runs, nine each.

Benny Leonard Is Flirting with Suspension

New York, June 5.—Benny Leonard, the New York lightweight, has been warned by the State Athletic Commission that if he failed to go through with his advertised bout with Johnny Dundee in Madison Square Garden Wednesday night he will face a six months' suspension.

Chairman Fred A. Wenck received a complaint that after all arrangements had been agreed to and the sale of tickets was actually under way, Billy Gibson, Leonard's manager, had, without any authority, called off the bout and had staged one with Freddie Welsh and Leonard at Washington Park, Brooklyn, for June 14.

The chairman summoned Jimmie J. Johnston, manager of Madison Square Garden, and after hearing his side of the story, made this announcement:

"Leonard will be recommended for a six months' suspension, and he furthermore will not be permitted to box in this State until he has carried out his contract with the Garden, unless he can show me this afternoon, when I have promised him a hearing, that this eleventh hour shift has for its basis some very strong argument. "I have summoned Billy Gibson, Leonard and the Washington Park management for the hearing. Personally I see no reason why Leonard should not keep both engagements."

New York Athlete Gets World's Mark Over Low Hurdles; Lowell Man Takes Marathon.

New York, June 5.—More than 50,000 persons saw John J. Eller, Irish American A. C., bang up a new world's record of 13 4-5 seconds for the 120-yard low hurdles at the American Liberty Day sport carnival at Sheepshead Bay, yesterday.

Eller was forced to break the record to beat J. K. Norton, Leland Stanford University. The coast athlete closed very strong and was only beaten for first honors by a foot.

Three reliable clockers agreed that Eller snapped the tape in thirteen and four-fifths seconds, which shattered the outdoor record by three-fifths of a second and the indoor mark by just one-fifth of a second. The race was run against the wind.

The first event was the Marathon run, which was over a course measuring about twenty miles. L. A. Davis, Bunting Club of Lowell, Mass., with a handicap of ten minutes, was the victor. His actual time was two hours three minutes thirty-five and three-fifths seconds.

FRANK KRAMER HAS ANOTHER TITLE IN

Newark, N. J., June 5.—Frank Kramer, the East Orange cycle king, won the second national championship race of the season at the Velodrome yesterday. Kramer has been riding in wonderful form, and there appears to be no way of beating the champion.

In the heat to decide first place Kramer triumphed over Reggie McNamara of Australia. In the grand semi-final he beat Bob Spears, while in the first semi-final he won easily over Martin ("Grassy") Ryan. Bob Spears won from Oscar Egg in the heat which decided third and fourth place. Kramer now has a lead of six points for the national title. His nearest rival is Spears, who has four points.

Frank Cavanagh won the Brassard race at one mile from Iver Lawson of Salt Lake City.

Harvard-Columbia Game Is Wanted

WITH the Princeton series meeting an untimely end, why not a game with New York's champions, Columbia, Mr. Harvard? The third contest with the Tigers was set for a week from next Friday at Fenway Park, but with Harvard winning two straight, the deciding contest becomes unnecessary.

HARVARD and Columbia were booked to meet in New York during the former's Spring recess, but rain upset the program. The Crimson subsequently advised the New Yorkers it would be impossible to play off the postponed game. However, it would be a fine bit of sportsmanship, and give the Harvard following a real baseball entertainment, to bring the Morningside Heights outfits to Cambridge.

It will be Jack Britton, welterweight champion, against Mike O'Dowd of St. Paul, who is generally rated the Northwest's best candidate for the title, in the main mixe at the Arena tomorrow night.

This will be Britton's first Boston start since he took command of the 142-145-pound division. He landed on top by defeating Ted (Kid) Lewis after Jimmie Johnston, the Britisher's manager, picked up the championship, which was lying around unclaimed.

Britton lost two decisions to Lewis at the Arena last Summer. In their first skirmish Jack appeared to have stepped much as swiftly as Lewis, but, in the second meeting, Hyannis went to Lewis. In their return bout Lewis disposed of Britton in emphatic fashion.

Eddie Mack appears firmly convinced that Terry Brooks of the East End, who, he claims, can make 133 pounds without the slightest difficulty, has the number of every New England lightweight, as well as the hide of the 126-pound champion, meaning Frankie Mark. Walter Burke, Joe Connelly et al., and to back up his claim has posted $200 with the sporting editor of the AMERICAN to substantiate his sweeping challenge.

"The money shows my faith in Brooks and will go as a side bet to any lightweight in New England who will sign to make 133 pounds, for a ten-round engagement with Terry," stated Mack. "As for Connelly, whom I know Brooks can make look foolish, we will give him ten pounds and bet the $200 at the prevailing price he goes down for the fall count.

"That I'm not kidding is proven by the fact I am putting up my coin. We won't sidestep any of the lightweights, but they will have to make 133 pounds. That's the only string attached to our deal. As for Connelly, we will give Joe ten pounds, and then some, if that isn't a big enough 'pull' for him. I know Connelly would be duck-soup for Brooks, as he's always wide open and that's the kind of a foe we prefer."

Jack Moir writes the AMERICAN challenging Johnny Noonan, Johnny Downey, Howard McRae or Johnny Emery on behalf of Jimmy Burns. In Moir's opinion Burns is not among the best boy his weight in New England.

Mid-Week Card at Beach Oval a Nifty One

Manager Nat Butler of the Revere cycle track is arranging a series of races between the star riders that is bound to be productive of just about the best sport ever offered the fans at Beach Oval.

The first of the big races was to have taken place Memorial Day, but rain knocked it out. It was put over to last Saturday night, but again Colonal J. Pluvius interfered. Manager Butler has now arranged to have it staged Wednesday night.

The main event of the mid-week competition will be a thirty-mile international motor paced, in which Wiley, Didier and Linart will clash. Their contest should be a particularly keen one.

In addition to the big race, there will be the usual card of amateur and professional events.

The Struggles of a Wife

Grace Is Invited on an Auto Ride by Dayton, and Sylvia Breaks In.

By Virginia Terhune Van De Water.

CHAPTER XLII.

Copyright, 1915, by Star Co.

To betray any excess of feeling was an unusual fe'nale that she submitted to her mother's embrace only for a moment. Yet in that moment the mother wondered if at last she and her child were to be as close as she had always wished they might be. But she did not have time to ponder this matter for more than an instant, for Grace pulled herself free with a laugh at her own weakness.

"I declare I must be getting very silly!" she exclaimed. "Being here so much with you seems to have made me childish and dependent. Forgive me, mother!"

"There is nothing to forgive," the mother protested hastily. "As your mother, dear child, is it not my privilege to have you talk freely with me?"

"Perhaps," Grace rejoined dubiously. "Yet, after all, there was nothing much to tell—it was only that I let myself think of what I might better put out of my mind. Don't fancy I am mean and envious, mother."

"But just for a moment it did not seem quite fair that one girl should have all the beauty and the money, while another—myself, for instance—has to work for her living, teaching children three-quarters of the year, and then only earn enough to allow her to buy the plain, practical clothes that she must have. Now, if I had beauty, or style, or something, it might be different. You remember the small girl who prayed 'Dear God, make me stylish!' I can make myself good!"

There was a bitter ring in her laugh, but this time the mother did not make the mistake of taking her in her arms.

BEAUTY NOT EVERYTHING

"No other women?" Grace supplemented, "since my arrival here I have become unromantically healthy."

"You look it, bless you," the man murmured. "You always look overflowing with vitality. I'll tell you what I want you to do this afternoon, if you will be good to me, and that is, go for a long ride up the valley and home by a mountain road. I know a trail that is not rocky, and we went over there when I was here last year. You have not tried it this Summer. Perhaps we may be the first that have been over it—at least, the first who have tried it in a motor this Summer. Are you afraid to attempt it?"

"Not a bit," Grace replied. "And you? Is the trip worth while to Myra?"

"You will go with us, won't you?" he asked, turning to her.

"Oh, thank you," she said, "but really I do not think it would be quite wise for me to take such a long trip on this warm day."

"What, you, the ideal golfing to Myra? You will go with us, won't you?"

"Oh, thank you," she said, "but really I do not think it would be quite wise for me to take such a long trip on this warm day."

"What, you, the ideal golfing to Myra? You will go with us, won't you?"

Sylvia Ainslie was coming down the front steps toward them.

"I call it inexcusable, perfectly refusing to go anywhere on such a lovely day!" she declared.

Stories from Here and There

Couldn't Lie On It

The scapegrace son of an affluent tradesman came to the end of his resources recently, and sent home a piteous appeal for funds, adding that if help were not forthcoming he and his wife would be driven to the workhouse.

The reply was crushing. It came in the shape of a laconic telegram:

"All you have made your bed, so you must lie on it."

But the quick-witted scapegrace was equal to the occasion. Without a moment's delay he wired back:

"Haven't got a bed. Bailiffs took it yesterday."

A substantial check followed in due course.

Mistaken Identity

A women fell off the pier into the sea, and a fat man began to raise an alarm.

"My wife! Oh, save my dear wife! A reward of ten dollars to the man who will save my wife from a watery grave!"

A fisherman leaped in and saved the woman. Then he modestly demanded the promised ten from the fat man. But the fat man bit his lip and said—

"I'm sorry, my dear fellow, but there has been some mistake. You see, it wasn't my wife you saved after all. It was my mother-in-law. I missed the two ladies up in the confusion of the moment."

The fisherman took out his purse. "That's pretty hard luck," he said. "How much do I owe you?"

Tabloid Tales

When the older brothers and sisters fuss for turns to hold the baby, Mother does that mean great love?

Ah, Child; how ignorant you are. It means, only, that the baby is new.

What, Mother, is meant by a "house party"? I read of it often these days.

A House party, Child, is one where the hostess has to worry about sheets, as well as tablecloths.

What, Mother Mine, is Ambition?

It is a praiseworthy hope and desire, Child, to do great things. Everyone is well supplied in youth, but it dwindles away in time like a cake of soap so that by the time a man is seventy he can't remember that he ever had any in the tub with him?

What, Mother, is a Bookmark?

It is anything, Child, which a woman uses to mark the place between the pages of Uplift literature.

But, Mother Mine, what is it called when the literature is not Uplift?

You are so unsophisticated, Little One. A bookmark is never used between the pages of trashy literature for the reason that after the reader begins to read, the book is not put down till the end is reached. I am old, and I have seen many books, but I never saw a bookmark in a trashy novel.

Who, Mother, is the ideal wife?

It is the wife, My Child, who, when her husband shaves and puts on his dress suit and says he is going out to help a friend dig a well, believes him.

In Our Wonderful World

The soldiers of the Kaiser are very superstitious, from the men in the ranks up to the Crown Prince. Wilhelm's eldest son carries a horseshoe with him on all his motor trips, and the Crown Prince spends most of the day in his motor-car. The horseshoe is attached to one of the doors of the car, and when being photographed in his motor-car the Prince always insists on the photographer "taking" the side of the car with the horseshoe. The soldiers of Wurttemberg pin their faith upon a little bag containing the dry petals of flowers, which they believe has the power of warding off the bullets. The Saxons sew into the lining of their waistcoats the wings of a bat, and think themselves to be invincible. The Bavarians hold on tenaciously to a still more bizarre custom. Before going into battle each soldier finds a birch tree, cuts his name and lets a few drops of blood fall upon the tree. This ceremony, they assert, assures recovery, no matter what the nature of the wound, when the leaves begin to grow again.

One of the most deadly callings, and one of which little is generally known, is that of workers in champagne cellars. The work, which is light, and without any obvious elements of risk to health, consists in turning over the bottles of champagne so that the wine may be clear and transparent and absolutely free from sediment. The men who do this work spend eight or ten hours a day in the dark wine cellars turning over bottles by the thousand. This monotonous duty they discharge day after day in semi-darkness, in a high temperature, unhealthy atmosphere, and absolute solitude. These combined conditions affect the nerves and health of the workers so seriously that few of them can continue at their posts until middle age.

You cannot secure the best services from a good watch or clock unless you know how to wind them so as to cause the least wear and irregularity in their delicate machinery.

If a watch is wound both morning and evening at about the same hour, and a little less than half what it could be wound, it will run more evenly, wear much longer, and keep more accurate time than if it is wound up tight once a day.

It is more or less dangerous to wind a watch during a heavy electric storm.

An eight-day clock should be wound twice a week at as regular periods as possible to secure the best results.

The Progress of Light

The first known method of producing a "light" was by the laborious process of friction, the rubbing of one dry piece of wood against another. It is said that savages noticed that forest fires occurred during wind, and observation showed them that it was the "sawing" of branch against branch that caused the flames. Hence the "friction" light.

The flint and steel and tinder box superseded wood friction, and that improvement was also due to observation. It was seen that the chipping of flints for arrowheads produced sparks, and hence the evolution of the flint, steel and tinder "lighter."

After a series of attempts, crude forerunners of the automatic lighter of today, came the "e-phur" match. This, however, was not complete in itself. The tip, made of a paste of chlorate of potash, sulphur, colophony, vermilion and gum, had to be dipped into a bottle containing sulphuric acid and rapidly withdrawn. An explosive flame was thereby generated which set fire to the match.

The next match was made with a tip of chlorate of potash, sugar and gum, and the sulphuric acid—necessary to make it fire—was, with specks of the paste, in a glass bead. This cumbrous method was superseded in 1832 by the friction match proper.

It was ignited by being drawn through a folded sandpaper. This was a phosphorus match, and was but a variation of the "friction" principle. These matches were dangerous and poisonous.

After a time came the safety match as we know it. A change in the phosphorus brought about the "safety," to the workers and the users.

Not Very Rich

A small boy was asked: "Who was the richest man mentioned in the Bible?"

He denied that it was Solomon, because the "Bible talks so slept with his father, an' if he was rich he'd have had a bed of his own."

"This, Too, Shall Pass"

A Hindu Proverb Applied to Life

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"This, too, shall pass," says the old Hindu proverb. Because of the truth of it, everything in life is endurable and nothing in life is important enough to agitate one's self much about.

Rain often takes possession of New England for three long, cold, stormy days of the "Northeaster." And temperamental people with little self-control frequently permit the "Northeaster" to make them blue and melancholy. It doesn't pay, for the storm passes and the mental depression which has been permitted to get hold on the individuals concerned slides or leaves unpleasant tracts of itself.

Havoc is made of far too many lives by a tendency to take seriously temporary states of being.

A dear old French woman I know has a little proverb of her own, "Tout pas, tout cas, et tout se remplace." Augustine's proverb translates itself. "Everything passes, everything breaks itself off and everything replaces itself."

Dear old Augustine, of the white head and the young heart, has gone through all the vicissitudes life can offer. Loss of money, the necessity of doing hard work in her old age, and the faithlessness of those she has trusted have marked lines in her gentle old face and in her heart, too.

But cheerily she offers her philosophy of life, which goes even further than the famous Hindu proverb.

"Everything passes." That is, nothing endures. Seasons change and the events of life pass on so that tomorrow carries us a step beyond today and next week has advanced us to unexpected stages. Pain is only for the hour.

"Everything breaks itself off." Without effort on our part the seemingly unendurable tragedies of life come of their own volition. When we have arrived at the point where our burdens are no heavy that we feel we can carry them no further, how often we find with startling suddenness that our burdens have dropped of their own accord from our bowed shoulders!

In the midst of the greatest rejoicing we must hold ourselves to sanity and not be mad with happiness because of the knowledge in our hearts that our happiness, too, will cease in time. "Everything breaks itself off"—and ceases to exist.

"Everything replaces itself." It is this which saves the things that go before from being tragedies. To the proverb "This, too, shall pass" there is a certain and finality. If nothing endures, your cynic will say: Why take the trouble of befriending what will only break down and go out of existence?

But here lies life's great and wonderful consolation—everything replaces itself. What though love does not endure? It fits us for an appreciation of the things that follow it. What though friendship fails? It gives us the power to appreciate other friendships with the toleration and sanity we have learned even in an unworthy relation.

A woman I know had a great ambition to become an opera singer. After five long years of preparation she failed in her chosen career. Life looked dark and hopeless for her. But life turned out to be minded dark and hopeless. Even with the knowledge of music she had gained and the influential friends she had made by her years of application to a subject she was not fitted to master, she found herself in possession of "inside knowledge" which made her first a very successful musical critic and then the writer of very delightful stories with the musical world as a background.

So the sorrow of her musical failure "passed," even as her musical aspirations and ambitions "broke themselves off" and her musical failure "replaced itself" with a literary success.

So gentle old Augustine's philosophy sings its refrain through all of life. "This, too, shall pass" may be a tragic resignation to the facts of life.

The Mystery of Dreaming

Some Strange Doings of the Mind When the Body Is Asleep

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"What causes dreams and how can they be prevented?" asks a correspondent.

"Subjective phenomena dependent on natural causes, or trains of ideas which present themselves to the mind during sleep," is the definition of dreams given by an authority on the subject—if there be any such authority.

The "natural causes" may mean disturbances of the nervous system produced by such things as indigestion, latent disease, over-fatigue, excitement of the sensorial nerves not sufficiently intense to awake the sleeper, etc., and their reaction upon the cells of the brain is easily enough understood. But whence come the "trains of ideas"? Do the brain cells themselves produce ideas? When you are awake you summon and control your thoughts, or think you do, but during sleep that sort of control is lost, the engineer is absent, yet the thoughts come thronging along as if a mysterious wind were noiselessly blowing through the temporarily abandoned web of the brain and agitating its gossamer threads in the most capricious manner. When consciousness comes back or awakens it tightens the loose ends, re-establishes the central control, selects, chooses and arranges among the flying thoughts, rejecting some, combining others and directing the current.

OFTEN REMEMBERED

Yet this same consciousness has seen the flitting dreams, for often it remembers them, though usually not clearly, and frequently not at all, if Sir William Hamilton was right in thinking that we dream always when we sleep, even though no recollection follows.

If we knew the real nature of consciousness and of thought we might contrive a better account of dreams. As it is, we cannot get beyond mere mechanical explanation. Accordingly, the only way to prevent dreaming is by avoiding the "natural causes" enumerated above. But for my own sake I would not prevent dreams if I could. They are a part of life, just as important to the soul, for all that we can tell, as any mental experience of the waking hours.

"In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed; then he openeth the ears of men and sealeth their instruction." The wonderful old Hebrew who wrote that was not using vain and empty words. In all times, by all peoples, dreams have been reckoned among the important phenomena of life. They distinguish between sleep and death, and possibly it was that consideration which led Hamilton, one of the greatest philosophical thinkers that ever lived, to assert his belief that we never sleep without dreaming.

Perhaps, after all, the characteristic of dreaming is not, as generally assumed, incoherence, but freedom. When awake, you hamper the mind with those innumerable rules and prohibitions of all sorts that tyrannize over your waking hours. Even when you are the slave of physical limitations, but in a dream the imagination, the highest faculty of intellect, shakes itself free from these things and shows its essential fluidity. There is something more and greater in the universe than rocky earths and fiery suns, than the laws of gravitation, cohesion and chemical affinity.

True, it may be affirmed that the experiences which we seem to have in a dream are based upon those of waking life, so that, after all, the imagination does not entirely cast off the fetters. But, granting that, still the mystery is not explained. All dreams are not incoherent, by any means. Poets have composed wonderful verses, mathematicians have solved intricate problems, lawyers have mastered difficult cases, while asleep.

QUESTIONS ARISE

In some of these instances logical reasoning has been the conspicuous feature of the dream; in others, intuition or invention. Is the brain when thrown out of connection with the waking will capable of these achievements, all by itself, running on like a flywheel after the belt is off, continuing to actuate the machinery, and causing it to turn out its regular products by stored up energy? Or is the mind something which does not sleep when the body sleeps, and which, like a master musician, in an idle moment, now gives whimsical touches to the keyboard of the slumbering brain, and now plays a complete tune?

In view of considerations like these it is no wonder that dreams have been regarded as furnishing a proof, or at least an argument, in favor of the independence of the mind or soul. If that were accepted the authority of so-called "prophetic dreams" would be vastly increased.

The stories of such dreams are innumerable, beginning in the Bible and running all through human literature and tradition. We who pride ourselves on our knowledge are apt to smile a little loftily at these and so put them all aside with the phrase "mere coincidence." Perhaps we are right and perhaps we are not. If we were omniscient we should know—but then we should lack the joys of uncertainty.

A Splendid Shot

Colonel Firebrand, who commanded the English Territorial battalion which was the pride of the countryside, was paying a visit to the rifle butts. His comments on the firing were acid in the extreme, and at last Captain Sabre ventured to comment.

"Why don't you take a shot yourself, Colonel, just to show them how it should be done?"

The gallant officer did not seem to be particularly keen on the experiment, but all the same he borrowed Private Sandy's rifle, took aim, and fired. A tiny cloud of dust arose about fifty yards from the target, but in spite of this a bull's-eye was signalled. Again and again the same thing happened, and Private Sandy received his rifle back with a few words as to the benefit of early drill as a good example.

When the private recommenced firing, and to his own surprise a bull's-eye was signalled. But his joy was short-lived. Suddenly he heard the raucous voice of Sergeant Smart: "Private Sandy, you fool! What's the matter with you, blockhead? The colonel ain't firing now."

A CHELSEA LADY NOW VERY HAPPY

Relates How She Suffered from Indigestion and Dyspepsia Prior to Taking Plant Juice.

MRS. LOUISE MULLETT

The most important thing that a woman can do for herself, and about which she is often very neglectful, is to watch carefully the condition of her stomach and bowels. The weary eyes, the bad breath, the frequent headaches, the sore back, the lassitude and listlessness, the nights of sleeplessness, the growing irritableness and nervousness, the cold feet and hands, the lack of appetite—all these symptoms are plain warnings of a bad stomach, deranged bowels, and given a general name, is nervous debility.

Many remedies can be obtained, but the best is the one made from herbs, Plant Juice, the new herbal system tonic. Thousands of women have been helped and benefited by the use of this preparation.

Among those is Mrs. Louise Mullett, who resides at No. 44 Heard Street, Chelsea, Mass., a popular lady of that town, who has many friends in this city also. She stated:

"I had suffered from indigestion and dyspepsia for many years and all the food I ate would ferment in my stomach and form gas. I suffered agony after eating and could sit down to eat at the table. I had headaches, my liver was terribly out of order, my kidneys were affected, my feet and hands across my back and in my side. I was so nervous I could not sleep at night and finally got so bad that I was not able to get about to do my housework. For the benefit of others who suffer, that I have taken four bottles of Plant Juice and it has made a new woman of me; I can eat any kind of food and digest it, I sleep well and have no more aches or pains of any kind. Plant Juice has cured me of all my trouble and I am very grateful."

I.T.U. PRESIDENT FIGHTS POSTAL MEASURE

By International News Service.

Washington, June 5.—Members of the Senate and House today received letters from M. O. Scott, president of the International Typographical Union, protesting against section 7 of the postoffice appropriations bill. This section extends without limitation, the power of the Postmaster-General to ship all magazines and periodicals by freight instead of by mail.

President Scott in his letter states:

"As president of the International Typographical Union I am deeply interested in the legislation concerning section 7 of the postoffice appropriation bill. I take this opportunity to protest against section 7. The passage of this section will give the postoffice department arbitrary power in shipment of all magazines and periodicals.

"It means a fast freight service for publishers throughout the country.

"May I ask that you vote against it?"

President Scott's protest was sent out from headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind. It follows the protest of the Periodical Publishers' Association placed in the Congressional Record yesterday.

Senator Ashurst said today that he expected to get his amendment striking out section 7 before the Senate about June 25.

"In my amendment to strike out section 7," Senator Ashurst said, "I intend no reflection on the Postmaster-General, for whom I have the highest regard, but I do not believe any man, however wise, just, fair and virtuous should be clothed with this immense authority of blue tagging any particular publication, thereby possibly annihilating the publication or at least reducing its prestige and revenue. The only reason this effort to clothe the Postmaster-General with such power has not attracted wider attention has been the forthcoming conventions.

"When members of Congress get back from those conventions and recognize the full purport of this section I predict a lively time."

GOV. PHILLIPS TOO ILL TO BE DELEGATE

By International News Service.

Milwaukee, June 5.—Governor E. L. Phillips will undergo an operation for appendicitis in the hospital early today.

The Governor was taken suddenly ill Sunday afternoon and the attack was so acute that it was decided, following a consultation of physicians, that it would be best to operate.

Governor Phillips' illness will prevent his leading the uninstructed delegation at the Chicago convention on Wednesday as had been planned.

SAYS HUSBAND REDUCED HER FOOD SUPPLY

Stockton, June 5.—After twenty-six years of happy married life, Mr. and Mrs. W. Gammons of Bridgewater today in the Probate Court asked for separate maintenance because she declared her husband, E. Clarke Gammons, worked with his father of the Continental Tin Company at Bridgewater, failed to supply her with proper food and nourishment.

Mrs. Gammons admitted that all the trouble started when her husband learned that a recent legacy of about $1,500 automobile and later sold it for $16 and a gentleman's gold watch and chain.

The automobile, according to Mrs. Gammons, was bought last August and sold in September. She testified that she paid for the machine by mortgaging her own $5,000 house for $800. When her husband learned of this last fall in November, she said he began to cut the food supply and that she was forced to leave him in March.

Mrs. Gammons testified she had been unable for two years to get proper food nourishment, she said.

Whenever she protested a list of articles to order, he would go over it and cut out many things. One day she had entered with a request for tea, saying that's too rich for my blood."

The last dinner consisted chiefly of potatoes and bread. He often brought home tainted meat. He had sand work keeping and because of this he refused to eat the poor meat served them.

Dr. W. E. Hunt testified that Mrs. Gammons was suffering from heart trouble and Brights disease and that he had suggested that she take automobile rides for her health.

IS KILLED TRYING TO SHIELD WOMAN

Worcester, June 5.—Guiseppi Corso was sought today charged with killing Pasquale Larocco, who lost his life shielding Mrs. Angelia Armento, boarding house mistress, when Corso attempted an automatic revolver in a crowded room on Shrewsbury street.

According to the story told the police by witnesses, Corso came home early about 9 o'clock from work and finding Mrs. Armento sitting on the boarding house, started an argument, during which he is said to have called Mrs. Armento a vile name. She then ordered Corso to pack his trunk and leave the house.

He went to his room and returned to the kitchen with an automatic revolver in his hand. While some boarders raised towards Mrs. Armento's head, but before he fired a shot, Larocco stepped between him and the woman.

Enraged at being frustrated in his attempt to shoot Mrs. Armento, Corso fired three shots at Larocco and several women who were visiting Mrs. Armento.

OREGON LAND BILL GOES TO PRESIDENT

Washington, June 5.—Carrying only slight alterations from the bill as it originally passed the House, the Oregon-California land grant conference report was agreed to by the House today and the bill now goes to the President for his signature.

The report provides that the federal government shall receive $1.25 per acre from the sale of land recovered from the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the remainder to be divided half and half between the State and county funds. The bill will turn back to the government about 3,360,000 acres.

JOKERS FORCE FIREMAN INTO 2-STORY LEAP

"A 'practical joke' played on an East Boston fireman, newly appointed to the force, caused him to leap from a second-story window and severely injure himself, according to a report made to the police. The affair was reported to Chief Grady by District Chief Goldobin for possible action.

The story, as told by members of the Fire Department in East Boston, follows:

PLAN "INITIATION."

"The man was appointed to the fire department last month and on Friday was assigned to Engine 11, at Eyton and Saratoga streets. One of the men in that house, who was expecting to go off on Friday, had previously made arrangements with other firemen to initiate the newcomer. When he arrived he was told to be careful and watch a certain fireman, but the latter was told to keep out of sight at those times was liable to be visited.

So strongly did they work on the new man's credulity, that, on the following day, when the other firemen returned, the new man watched him every minute. He even commenced to shine the shoes of the fireman "addicted to fits," obeyed without question every order and was generally treated the supposed unfortunate into a state of panic.

All day Saturday the new man eyed the other fireman, with nervous interpolations. He was bullied by the latter, that it was decided the time was ripe for the "initiation."

DISCHARGES REVOLVER.

On that day the captain was off, and when the lieutenant went to dinner there was no superior officer in the house. The men were gathered in the bunkroom on the second floor, when the performance began.

With a wild cry one of the firemen leaped into the air, and as the men muttered for cover in pretended fear, he drew a 22-calibre revolver, loaded with blank cartridges, from his pocket, and began to discharge it, waving it about his head.

At the fat cry the new man was on his feet. Then he leaped through the window. Gathering himself together on the sidewalk beneath, he tore down the street, clad only in shirt and trousers, shouting loudly. A drug store hove in view, and into this he dashed, and, calling the police, told them that a fireman in East Boston was crazy.

Sergeant Daniel Sweeney, who was on the desk, was ordered to proceed. Sergeant William Fitzgerald and eight men to the scene, and they made a record time, and the new man's cry of patrol. As the sergeant pushed through the throng, the new fireman seized him and implored him not to enter the firehouse, as the man "in a fit" was still there.

The victim of the "joke" refused to enter the engine house until District Chief Goldboid came down and explained the matter to him.

MAY TEST SANITY OF U. S. FLAG BURNERS

New York, June 5.—Those advocates of world patriotism who burned the American flag at a Church of the Social Revolution Thursday night will suffer a severe blow to their dignity when they appear before Chief Magistrate McAdoo for trial today. Instead of being permitted to argue their case against the police and the courts, they will be questioned by physicians as mental weaklings.

District Attorney Swann stated he was convinced that adults who would participate in such a ceremony were lunatics and should be treated as such instead of criminals. As a result of this decision it is probable that he will urge their commitment to the Manhattan ward at Bellevue for observation.

BELIEVE BANGOR MAN MURDERED

Bangor, Me., June 5.—The body of Albert Beaulieaux, seventeen, hoeing many wounds, was found this morning in the Penobscot River, opposite this city. The skull was crushed and there were twelve gashes in the scalp. Medical Examiner McNeil and the police expressed the opinion that the young man was murdered.

UNIVERSALISTS VOTE $10,000 ADVERTISING

"Thinking a tabernacle by our denomination, I am certain, is not the solution of the problem," said Rev. Dr. Harold Marshall, president of the State Convention, in his address.

"Are we going to follow Billy Sunday methods? He will beat us all hollow. I would suggest spending $10,000 during the campaign in newspaper advertising, as has been done in Baltimore. We've got to have more publicity.

"Today you want to put reporters out of this meeting. I am opposed to publicity. Before that I am in favor of getting all the publicity we can get, but not in following Billy Sunday methods.

"If we built a tabernacle in Boston Billy Sunday would look upon us as mere sinners," said Rev. Dr. S. M. Perkins of the First Church, Lynn. "If we would have more publicity than by building a tabernacle, and personally I would like a consumate ass to identify myself with it."

Mrs. Rita C. Willard of Cambridge said: "Billy Sunday is the devil's own agent; here, the Rev. Dr. G. C. Dowey: "What he said is enough to give any one spiritual indigestion till the day of judgment," she asserted.

"Let us convert Billy Sunday and bury the tabernacle idea," urged the Rev. Hendrick Vossems of Somerville.

"All I have to say is that Billy Sunday's religion is not the religion of the Divine Master," claimed the Rev. D. N. Aldeard.

"Billy Sunday is no medicine for my soul, not even a beverage," Rev. Dr. F. Bishee said.

"When Billy Sunday comes to Boston he will fill the air with the hysterics of religious emotionalism and intolerance. He is like an alarm clock. His tabernacle is an ecclesiastical hippodrome."

$100,000 A DAY LOST ON FILMS

Providence, R. I., June 5.—One hundred thousand dollars a day is lost by incompetent handling of moving pictures, and the eyes of 20,000,000 people are weakened by speeding machines, according to H. H. Richardson at a dinner of managers and operators representing sixty film theatres.

He declared it a crime to operate a machine at more than the standard rate of sixteen pictures per minute, and urged laws to punish offenders. He estimated that 50,000 films and the eyes of the United States and Canada handle 350,000 reels a day at approximate cost of $15,000,000. He said overspeeding films caused a flicker that is detrimental to the eyesight.

The Shortest Road to Honest Government Is by Way of Public Ownership of the Public Service Corporations

THE government of our northern neighbor, Canada, is acquiring three railroads in that dominion. These railroads are the Quebec & Saguenay, the Lotbiniere, Megantic, and the Quebec, Montgomery & Chalevoix. These, with the Intercolonial Railroad, will make four railroads which the government of Canada will own when it completes the acquisition of the three roads mentioned.

Thus public ownership of the railroads is tardily making its way in America. The people of this continent, who had such a splendid lead over the people of Europe in sound, prosperous, economic conditions, have been rapidly overtaken for the last forty years by the other civilized people of the world. With the acquisition of private wealth as the great goal of our ambition, we have allowed every man to look out for himself and left the devil to take the hindmost. This old-fashioned, repudiated doctrine, that everything must be left to the individual and that the people in their organized capacity must do as little as possible, was abandoned in Europe, first by the Germans, forty years ago, and then, as the splendid progress of Germany attracted world-wide attention and as the cause of that progress was noted, their example was imitated by all the other great nations EXCEPT THE UNITED STATES.

What the individual can do in his haphazard, disorganized way, all the people, in their organized capacity, through their government, can do a thousand times better always. This the Germans, the Australians and the New Zealanders discovered and the other countries followed in their wake in order to obtain that efficiency and power, which they recognized as flowing from this new economic theory that the big unit, the power of organization, the power of all the people applied to a great task, meant a thousand times greater results than the results of spasmodic, sporadic, disorganized, selfish individual effort.

They tell us in opposition to public ownership of the railroads that individuals built the railroads, that the capital of private individuals took the risk in the great railroad systems. This would not be very interesting, even if it were true, BUT IT IS NOT TRUE. The great adventures in the building of railroads were taken by public and not by private money. Individuals entered the field after the great railroads that opened up new country had been built. These men were the harpies who stole the feast from the table; the men who sought to reap and did reap what others had sown—who sought to earn their bread from the sweat of other brows than their own. They wrecked more railroads than they built. They ruined more men than they led to prosperous investments. The huge private fortunes they have accumulated, that now threaten the stability of our democratic republic, rest upon the ruins of prosperous railroads and prosperous and honest investors, alike despoiled by these exploiters.

They say that the American people are too corrupt to own and operate these public utilities, but they are not too corrupt to build, own and operate the Panama Canal, which private capital failed to do. They are not too corrupt to operate the Postoffice, a bigger business than any railroad and better managed than any railroad ever was or ever will be under private ownership. They are not too corrupt so to handle the Parcels Post business as to save the American people millions of dollars a year from the charges that the express companies had been making. There is nothing so indecently impudent as this argument addressed to the people themselves that they are too corrupt to own and operate their railroads as the people of other nations own and operate their railroads.

If we are a corrupt people today it is because private ownership and control of the public service corporations has made us corrupt. The beginning of great corruption in our national and State politics coincided with the beginning of railroad speculation in the late forties and early fifties. It reached its maximum during the period when high finance was running amuck, when the courts, legislatures and executive officers were in open alliance with these public service corporations. One of the very greatest arguments in favor of public ownership is that it will dry up this dangerous source of corruption—the public service corporations in private hands.

While private individuals perform a public function they will constantly resist public regulation. They will constantly attempt to charge the public the highest price for service that the public will pay, and render the least service the public will accept. The easiest method of keeping up the charges and holding down service will always be through the control of the public representatives.

Moreover, while the great public corporations are in private hands and their power and wealth are being used to corrupt public life, their moral standards will inevitably react on their employees. Employers who exhibit no moral restraint toward public officials and no respect for the law, inevitably have no moral restraint in their relations with their stockholders and no respect for those laws which are calculated to protect the stockholders against exploitation by their managers. So it comes to pass that both the stockholders of the railroads and the people at large are plundered by these private managers.

The shortest road to honest government is by way of public ownership of the public service corporations. All the great civilized countries of the world have already acquired their railroads. Only the backward nations and the United States are still permitting the railroads to be more powerful than the government, for in the long run they are and necessarily will be more powerful than the government. There may be some short periods in which the public arouses itself and compels its representatives to some degree of independence of the railroads, but those periods are brief and far between.

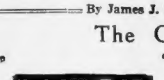
More Truth Than Poetry

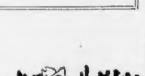
By James J. Montague

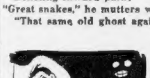
The Ghost

WHEN William Barnes lies down to sleep
As bosses sometimes do,
In accents that are harsh and deep
An awful voice cries, "Boo!"
And William's pulse begins to throb,
Denoting inward pain;
"Great snakes," he mutters with a sob,
"That same old ghost again!"

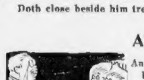


"AS one who on a lonesome road
Doth walk in fear and dread,
And having once turned 'round walks on
And turned no more his head—
Because he knows a frightful fiend
Doth close beside him tread."





WHEN Penrose seeks a little rest,
As even bosses must,
He clutches wildly at his breast
As if his heart would bust.
And certain lines that Coleridge penned
Exactly fit his case,
As anyone would apprehend
Who slanted at his face:



AND thus with all the merry crew
Who with a mocking scoff,
And many a "Pish!" and "Tush!" and "Pooh!"
Have killed the Colonel off.
But back he comes, by day and night,
To stand beside the bed
And freeze their hearts with shuddering fright,
He doesn't know he's dead!

At Any Odds

If Willie and Nicky and Georgie and Poincare were all put in one of the front line trenches at Verdun to talk it over, we would do some cheerful betting that peace would be arranged before night.

How We Impose on Our Feet

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects.

PART THREE

WE seem unable to get away from the notion that the things which are hardest to do are the ones that are best for us. Hence we insist ourselves and we train our children to always turn out the toes and hold back the shoulders when walking, and, above all, that to turn your toes in under any circumstances is one of the seven deadly sins. As a matter of fact more than half our walking should be done with the toes turned in.

We should follow the example of the soldiers, and when we are walking down the principal streets and more or less in the public eye, in our imagination at least, "out to give the girls (or boys) a treat," as the saying is, assume a deliberate, parade-like gait with toes out and head up. But even this pose ought to be relaxed frequently, as by gazing in at shop windows, or bowing or leaning forward to speak to our friends. The gait would be not only difficult but dangerous anywhere except upon good sidewalks or smooth, level surfaces.

When you turn into a side street or reach the open part of town and start to hurry a bit you will find that it is practically impossible to make any speed with your toes turned out, save at risk of breaking your feet or falling over them.

You must absorb the foot almost straight forward and turn the toe in at the end of your stride as soon as you begin to make speed.

This is perfectly right and proper and should not be fought against in any way, because our feet when we are walking at any reasonable speed do not move straight forward and in straight parallel lines, but in a series of bow-shaped curves, or long, graceful "waddles," something like the strokes in skating, only the curves turn in at the end instead of outward.

It is not correct to say that some people turn out their toes when they walk and others turn them in. We all do both, except those of us who are so unfortunate as to be permanently pigeon-toed, according to the rate at which we are going.

Out, when we are walking slowly and formally; in, when we are "hiking" or running. Indeed, except in very leisurely walking, we toe out at the beginning of each stride and in at the end of it.

The main practical point is, take enough of this head-up and shoulders-back walking to give you an erect figure and graceful carriage, say a mile or two a day. But don't try to carry it beyond that and don't fight against the forward-leaning, arm and leg swinging, "skating" stride that comes naturally when you want to really get somewhere and cover the ground.

You must lean forward if you want to "hit the trail" to any purpose, for the same reason that the bicycle-racer always does, to get your centre of gravity as far in front as possible.

Walking, and still more so running, is simply falling forward and catching yourself before you lose your balance and repeat the figure. And you must toe in at the end of your stride so as to strike the ground with the whole outer side of your foot at once as nearly as possible, instead of coming "bump" on the heel alone.

The Great Mystery of the Tides

Every Child Is Taught They Are Caused by the Sun and Moon, but No One Comprehends Exactly How

By Garrett P. Serviss

WE may liken the ocean to a respiring giant that stretches his vast length around all our coasts, whose breath is the flood of waters, now poured impetuously into every bay and inlet as the monster exhales, and now swiftly drawn out again with his next inhalation, while, coincidentally, his broad breast heaves and falls and rhythmically the navies rise and sink, feeling the resistless power of the life that slumbers underneath their keels.

But it is a forced breathing, this of great Neptune, and he would lie still as death but for two life-savers in the sky which strive without ceasing to save him from suffocation through the stagnation of his own waters.

These Samaritans are the moon and the sun, as every school child is taught without understanding, just as most of us know that a pulmotor may bring a drowned man to life again without comprehending exactly how.

This is the mystery of the tides, and a mystery it remains, in part, although mankind has wondered about it and studied it from time immemorial. Although it had been noticed long before Newton was born that there was a synchronism between the motion of the moon and the tides, yet it was not until he had developed his theory of gravitation that the manner of the moon's action in producing tides became plain.

The moon is the principal agent, more than twice as effective as the sun, and since they both work in the same way, it is unnecessary to introduce more than one of them in a simple explanation.

That explanation depends upon three proved facts—first, that the attraction of gravitation increases in force with decrease of distance; second, that the solid earth yields as a whole united body to the gravitational pull of the moon, and, third, that the ocean, being composed of watery particles free to move among one another, does not yield to the lunar tug as a whole united body, but its waters flow over the earth's crust toward the place where the resultant of the forces acting upon them is greatest.

The consequence is that they are, in a sense, heaped or swelled up in a tidal wave, and the rotation of the earth on its axis carries this wave westward, or in a direction contrary to that of the rotation. So, if you envelop a school globe in a sheet of gauze and hold the gauze so that it cannot turn with the globe when the latter is rotated, the gauze will move over its surface in an opposite direction. Your hand, gathering up and holding the gauze on one side may represent the attraction of the moon upon the oceanic waters.

The water is heaped up by the moon's attraction in accordance with the first of the three fundamental facts mentioned above; namely, that the attraction increases with decrease of distance. In truth, it increases inversely as the square of the distance, which augments the effect. The side of the earth that is at any time toward the moon is about 4,000 miles nearer the moon than the centre of the earth.

But, according to our second fundamental fact, the earth yields as a single solid body, to which we may now add that the effect of the pull is the same as if the entire substance of the earth were concentrated at its centre. It follows that the waters of the ocean, being free to move over their solid bed, and experiencing an attraction greater than that felt at the earth's centre, tend to flow toward the place where the moon's attraction is greatest.

Now comes the point usually found most difficult to understand. There is a tide on the side of the earth turned from the moon as well as on the side turned toward it. This is a result of the same fundamental facts. The water on the side opposite to the moon is 4,000 miles farther from the moon than the centre of the earth, and is, consequently, proportionately less attracted.

Thus the earth, as a whole, tends to be drawn away from the water on that side, just as on the other side the water tends to be drawn away from the earth.

This is, in substance, the theory of the tides, and no doubt it is a true explanation of their fundamental cause. But great difficulties arise when the theory is applied to the actual tides that flow around the coasts of the continents. If the earth were a smooth sphere, covered everywhere with an ocean of unvarying depth, there would be no difficulties of the kind.

But then we should either not exist at all or else we should be fish or whales, or sharks, and in that case, instead of astronomers, physicists and mathematicians we should probably produce only big eaters.

Taking the situation as it is, we find that the tides play the deuce with the theory. They do not disprove it, but they show that it is altogether insufficient to cover the facts. The sources of the trouble are the varying depth of the water and the sub-division of the ocean into many different seas, more or less completely separated by huge oddly-shaped continents.

Because the human mind loves simplicity, which is easy to understand, and shrinks from complications, persistent attempts have been made to force the tides into compliance with a uniform theory, but they refuse to submit.

Thus it has long been taught, in the text books, that the tides are all associated parts of one universal "world phenomenon." We have been told of "a parent wave," starting in the broad, deep waters of the Southern Pacific, and gradually spreading round the globe, combining in its course with minor tides started in smaller oceans.

This parent tide has even been imaginatively, but with authoritative assertion, traced around distant capes, through straits, and across the length and breadth of many seas. One text-book writer has averred that this tide is "forty hours old" when it begins to wash upon the shores of the North Sea.

Now, all this must be abandoned as pure speculation, according to the investigations of our Coast and Geodetic Survey. Although, as Dr. Charles Lane Poor says, "the theory that the tides are a world phenomenon has the support of the world's greatest mathematicians and all the prestige their names can lend," the investigations referred to seem to prove that the tides "are strictly local in character and in being, and that the tides of the Atlantic Ocean are due to the oscillations in the waters of the Atlantic, independent of what has happened, or may happen, in the waters of the Pacific."

Still nobody doubts that the sun and the moon are the causers of the tides, but Neptune, instead of being a unit, appears as a multiple, giant who breathes with many watery lungs.

Thoughts by the Way

Have you an objective point in life, or do you "drift with the tide?"

Are you satisfied because you have a good job at the present time—and do you consequently spend your income to the limit?

Have you fallen into a rut and are you unwilling to put forth the necessary effort to lift yourself out of it?

You cannot improve your earning capacity without effort, and if you do not get up and shake yourself you will find yourself hopelessly left. Nobody can stand still. It is either go on or go back.

Some younger and more energetic man will crowd you out of your place, and then it won't be long before you find yourself in some old man's job, with no hope of promotion and nothing but the small pay which goes with the job.

Have an objective point, and then "go to it."
